VOL. V.....NO. 1442. NEW-YORK, FRIDAY, MAY 2, 1856. PRICE TWO CENTS.

hearing us on Saturday, that he had accomplished what he intended to. He had got up another row he believed, and the country will hear more foolish things of course thereby, of the Sheriff of Douglas County, that was driven out of town by a woman. We are not making great preparations for a collision, for we can't feel that it is necessary. When that has been proved to us, "we are in."

PRESENT CONDITION OF AFFAIRS.

Now how does it stand? Jones comes with a warrant issued by a Territorial Justice, and sets as Sheriff of Douglas County, because he knows, that as long as we can gather strength to resist, we will never recognize them as legal constituents, nor its Sheriffs as legal officers. He has already been sworn as United States District-Marshal, but when here he takes particular pains to tell us that he don't come in that capacity, but as Sheriff, &c. Also he could in ten minutes get a legal process from Judge LECOMPTE, (if we have criminals here,) and then our people would have no desire to see him molested or his criminals rescued. But, no. He understands what will get up a demonstration best just now when the Committee are among us, and the whole plan is laid for him at Lecompton by the "rectified spirits" of Slave Propagandism, and even the words are put into his mouth that he must use when "in the damned Abolition, emigrant-aid town of Lawrence." We have no organization yet to offer any resistance to Jones or any other man, and Woon and all others implicated are about town as usual. Whether they will if the United States troops come into the play, is doubtful; but for the present we claim our old appellation of "peaceable, law-abiding citizens," as we understand it. I do not wish to raise any false alarms, but will merely suggest to all interested, the propriety of letting this Yankee town alone severely.

THE CONGRESSIONAL COMMITTEE.

Last Friday, a party from Ohio, numbering nearly one hundred, all well armed, under charge of S. N. Woon, of this place, arrived in town. The same day Gov. ROBINSON, Senator REDMAN and the Washington Committee, (with the exception of OLIVER,) and their subordinates, arrived also. Besides, were Col. PRICE, and a small party from Providence, R. I. In the evening a meeting was held in the Free-State Hotel, when Gov. ROBINSON, Senator REDMAN, Mr. SIMS, of New-Haven, Col. PRICE and others, made very stirring speeches, and all hearts seem to welcome anew our friends from the States.

Messrs. HOWARD and SHERMAN left soon for Lecompton to obtain the records of meetings, elections, &c., necessary for their examination, and returned to this place last night.

Gen. WHITFIELD passed yesterday and is now at Lecompton, in council with SHANNON, OLIVER and other arch spirits of their dye, preparatory to bringing the black records of their unprecedented career before this Committee. Gen. WHITFIELD, when in conversation with a Pro-Slavery friend at Leavenworth last week, said: "We stand d——d bad before the country now, especially at Washington, and I would like to bring about something, if possible, to prejudice the Committee against this Free-State movement" RANDOLPH.

Newspaper Accounts.

THE PRO-SLAVERY SIDE.

The St. Louis Republican's (Pro-Slavery) account of the difficulty is as follows:

The Sheriff and his posse returned to-day from Lawrence, without Woon; he was barricaded in his house, and strongly guarded. They attempted to take one or two other prisoners, but were forcibly prevented. While in Lawrence, the Sheriff and party were groaned at, hissed, threatened and cursed—every thing was done to aggravate them to commit an assault, so it is believed, that the fanatics might have an excuse, however poor, to maltreat, perhaps to shoot, all of them. They hate Jones, and would like to have a chance to take his life in a row. After using all due means to arrest the prisoners, the party left, and returned home about 4 o'clock.

The question then on everybody's lip was, "what will the Governor do?" All was excitement; Council after Council was held; men hurried to and fro; the Governor looked thoughtful; the Secretary seemed uneasy; General WHITFIELD appeared determined; the settlers gathered in from their claims, and all were on tip-toe waiting for the news of what was to be done. Some wanted the Sheriff to summon a posse of two or three hundred, whe should go to Lawrence and take the prisoners at all hazards; but happily wiser counsels prevailed, and it was agreed that the Governor should issue a call for a small detachment of United States troops; and accordingly an express rider will start from here in a few moments for Fort Leavenworth, with orders for Col. SUMNER to send on the detachment. The idea is this: the Abolitionists refuse to acknowledge the authority of the laws, although they promised to do so in order to save their necks in December, and writs are to be put in the hands of the Sheriff, not only for Wood, but for all those who forcibly rescued him from Jones, and they are to be taken with the aid of a small force, if it can be done, but to be taken if it requires all the Government troops in the Territory.

From the Missouri Democrat, (Free State.)

LAWRENCE, Tuesday, April 29, 1856.

I re-open my letter to add the following: By a gentleman who has just arrived from Westport, we learn that JONES, on his return to Lecompton, made a statement to Governor SHANNON, who immediately wrote a dispatch, and a messenger was sent to Kansas City to telegraph to the President that the people of Lawrence were in open rebellion, setting the officers of the law at defiance, and asking for an order to call out the troops to put it down, etc. SHANNON declares that WOON, TAPPAN, MONROE and others shall be arrested if there is force enough in the Union to do it, and the laws shall be enforced. Messengers were sent from Lecompton to Missouri, and to different parts of the Territory, to rally their forces to come down upon Lawrence.

Our people are making preparations for such an emergency, always acting upon the principle that it is better to be fooled a dozen times than be caught napping once. The women will enter upon the discharge of that important duty, making cartridges, &c., soon, and our men will be ready to act on the defensive. Yours, T.

Later from the West Indies and Venezuela.

ARRIVAL OF THE TENNESSEE.

The Tennessee, pioneer of this line, arrived yesterday morning from her third homeward trip, after a passage of eleven days from Venezuela, stopping at St. Thomas and at Puerto Rico. The weather has been mild, though the wind has not been favorable.

The steamer brings full freight, and more passengers than she can very comfortably accommodate.

There was nothing of importance taking place in St. Thomas at the time of the departure of the Tennessee, with the exception of a new postal law which was carried into effect about a month ago, to the very great dissatisfaction of the public, and even ruin of the mercantile community.

Venezuela continues to enjoy the blessings of peace, already commencing to see the advantages of it. The telegraph between Laguayra and Caracoas will soon commence operations, to the very great delight of the community. Great credit is due to Mr. MANUEL DE MONTGRAN for his perseverance in establishing in Venezuela an enterprise which, a few months ago, was even mocked at. The wires will extend, not only to Caracoas, but also to Valencia and Puerto Cabello, traversing a distance of a hundred and fifty-six miles.

Congress was still sitting. The last reading of the great railroad project had been given in the House, and there is every reason to believe that before the sessions come to an end it will be a law of the Republic. This is another enterprise which, in conjunction with the telegraph and steam communication, is destined to change entirely the face of that country.

A great step will be taken next year by the present Government of Venezuela, to wit: reform of its Constitution; and, if possible, the reconstruction of the ancient Republic of Columbia, under a federal system.

The Dutch question has been amicably settled, and great praise is due to the foreign ministers for their exertions in bringing this unpleasant affair to a speedy termination. Prominent among them is Hon. CHARLES HAMM, American Minister resident in Venezuela.

The West Indies and Venezuela Line—Complementary Resolutions.

STEAMSHIP TENNESSEE, OFF HAMMOCK OF ST. THOMAS, Saturday, April 5, 1856.

At a meeting of the passengers of the steamship Tennessee, Geo. W. HATCH, Esq., was called to the Chair and C. R. EMERSON appointed Secretary and the following resolutions were unanimously passed:

WEBSTER have secured to themselves the experience and capacity of an accomplished officer of thorough and tried knowledge, cool determination, undischarging courage, minutely scrutinizing watchfulness over its interests, and the success of its organization and safety of its property.

The House Committee on Foreign Affairs in Consultation with Secretary Marcy—The Bounty Land Bill.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Daily Times.

WASHINGTON, Thursday, May 1.

The House Committee on Foreign Affairs were in consultation with Secretary MARCY to-day, relative to steps for the prevention of a recurrence of disturbances at Panama. Of course nothing can be done except by resolution, and by stationing men-of-war at Panama and Aspinwall. It is understood that these steps were promptly decided upon at to-day's meeting.

The amendments made by the House to-day in the Bounty Land Bill leave it little more than authority for parol and record evidence in the service It will become a law in this shape. S.

Prompt Action of Government relative to the Panama Massacre—Resignation.

WASHINGTON, Thursday, May 1.

There is no doubt but what the Government will take prompt measures relative to the outrages at Panama. The Secretary of the Navy supposes that the sloop St. Mary's is there by this time under the instructions for her ordinary cruise, but an additional vessel of war will be dispatched from the Atlantic coast, although the orders have not yet been issued. It is highly probable that a Commissioner will be sent thither to ascertain the facts of the case.

Chief Examiner LANGDON resigned his post in the Patent Office to-day. He intends shortly to sail for Europe.

Amount in the Treasury Subject to Draft.

WASHINGTON, Thursday, May 1.

The United States Treasurer reports the amount on hand, subject to draft on the 30th ult., to be $1,885,000.

The Action of the Naval Retiring Board—The Nebraska Contested Seat—The Bill to Refund Duties—The Vice-Presidency, &c.

Special Correspondence of the N. Y. Daily Times.

WASHINGTON, Tuesday, April 29, 1856.

THE NAVAL RETIRING BOARD.

The Senate devoted to-day, again, to the matter of the Naval Retiring Board—Mr. BELL concluding a two-days' speech in defence of Lieut MAURY. Not even the Kansas question has led to so much earnest and acrimonious debate as has the pending effort to obtain a reversal of the action of the Board aforesaid. Indeed, it is the theme which has occupied far the larger proportion of the time devoted by the Senate to debate since December last. The friends of the Board have generally contented themselves with silence, except when it became necessary to meet and answer some misstatement or misunderstanding of facts. Powerful arguments have been made in support of the Board, however, by Senators CLAYTON and BENJAMIN, and two or three additional, of less pretension, by other members of the body. Certainly the subject has been discussed nearly or quite sufficiently. If the Senate is not enlightened upon the merits of the case by this time, it never can be; and, surely, it is high time that the vote was taken, and the question settled in one way or the other. Few votes, if any, have been changed by the protracted discussion; and it is not likely that others will be now. I believe I hazard nothing in reaffirming my conviction that, when the question is reached, the Senate will sustain the general action of the Board, and favor only such modifications as were suggested long since by the Senate's Committee on Naval Affairs. If this is to be the result at last, why not yield to it, Messieurs Senators, and proceed at once to the consideration of the numerous naval promotions consequent upon the action of the Board, and now pending in Executive Session? As the case stands, even the nomination of the gallant INGRAHAM—first as a Past Captain, and next as head of a Bureau in the Navy Department—hangs by the eye lids.

NEBRASKA CONTESTED ELECTION—FOLLY.

To-day had been set apart for the consideration of the Nebraska contested election case, but as ALEXANDER H. STEPHENS, of Georgia, is still absent, and is understood to desire to make a minority report in favor of the sitting delegate, BIRD B. CHAPMAN, the consideration of the case was postponed for three weeks. The long-continued absence from his duties of a Southern member of the Committee on Elections, will doubtless strike most men out of Washington as rather a queer reason for postponing a decision of the question who is entitled to represent the people of Nebraska in the House, especially when the Committee report that the sitting Delegate is not entitled to the seat; nevertheless, strange as it may appear, our friends made scarcely any opposition to the postponement. Indeed, it must be confessed that the Anti-Administration men in the House daily exhibit a lamentable lack of shrewdness and Parliamentary tact, which in nine cases out of ten gives the essential victories of legislation to their enemies. For example; yesterday the bill to refund duties upon goods destroyed by fire was pending in the House on a motion to keep it out of the Committee of the Whole—that tomb of legislation from which scarcely anything emerges to life except by something akin to the miraculous.

CULPABLE TIMIDITY.

That bill,—just and equitable as any which ever was brought before Congress—was a measure of especial importance to New-York, because the great conflagrations in which dutiable goods in large amounts were destroyed, occurred in your City. A reference to the Yea and Nay list will show that quite a number of our Northern Anti-Administration men,—some of them New-Yorkers, too—voted with the Administration men to kill the bill. Immediately afterwards, motions were made to take bills out of Committee of the Whole, for the benefit of the Slaveholding States; and not a few of our prudential friends, who, just before, could not vote to keep the New-York bill out of the tomb, came up promptly, and without difficulty, to the work of helping the Slaveocracy to take their measures out of the same slate which they had just forced upon! I submit it to your readers, whether this is sensible. Just so it has been in former years. Thus our friends, some of them, could not vote for the French Spoliations bill for fear there might be some fraud under it, some how or other; and because designing venal scoundrels, inside of Congress and out of it, had raised the bugbear cry of "corruption!" after they had failed to arrange for the feathering of their own nests by fleecing the claimants. But these timid creatures had no difficulty in voting a gratuity of $2,000,000 to Texas in her debt-bill, or $10,000,000 to the Administration for the purchase of land under the Gadsden Treaty! Will the constituencies not look after their representatives a little, and ascertain who of them have brains enough to know how to be honest and just at one and the same time?

THE HAYTI FAMILY.

The war between the rival factions, with reference to the Democratic nomination for the Presidency, grows fiercer every hour. The Union here continues to defend Mr. BUCHANAN much after the fashion of the gossip who slanders a village belle, whom nobody suspects, by continually defending her from imaginary charges affecting her good name. The lesser organ—less scrupulous and with far less wisdom—boldly copies from opposition presses articles showing that Mr. BUCHANAN is not to be trusted upon the Slavery question; and all the Pierce papers everywhere are unanimous in vociferating the necessity of putting the Nebraska-Kansas bill forward as the greatest issue of the campaign. This, of course, is aimed at "Old Buck." PIERCE, however, is becoming resigned to the prospect of a failure at Cincinnati, and busying himself in the promotion of his Hunter alternative project, of which I advised you a fortnight ago. He will kick hard, however, at Cincinnati, and the evidences accumulate that there will be a grand row at the Convention. The impression gains ground, too, that Mr. BUCHANAN's availability in consequence of his non-committalism in favor of the Nebraska-Kansas policy, will give him the lead. Certain it is, that he will be more acceptable to the Anti-Slavery men of the North than any other Democratic Candidate hitherto named.

VICE-PRESIDENCY.

Among the gentlemen whose names are mentioned as the Republican Candidate for the Vice Presidency, is Hon. DANIEL MACE, of Indiana, the present Chairman of the House Committee on Post-Offices and Post Roads. He was originally a Democrat, but separated from his party on the Nebraska issue, and is now thoroughly Republican.

PANAMA RAILROAD AND POSTMASTER-GENERAL CAMPBELL.

I notified you some time since that the Postmaster-General had been in correspondence with the Panama Railroad Company, in regard to the price paid for transporting the mails across the Isthmus, and that the Company had compelled Mr. CAMPBELL to pay up arrearages under their contract with the Department. As I then stated, it is Mr. CAMPBELL's purpose to go to Congress with a proposition for the reduction, by law, of the price to be paid for carrying the mails from Aspinwall to Panama. I perceive that he is engaged in preparing the public mind for this action by public representations through the Press. He shows that the sum paid is enormous, and is increasing at a startling rate. He conceals the fact, however, that the Company have offered to contract for a term of years at a fixed sum per annum, less in amount than that they are now receiving. Congress will, doubtless, be liberal in dealing with a Company whose venturous enterprise has given us a first-class Railroad across the deadly Isthmus, in place of the almost impracticable route by which, a few years since, the mails were transported. Surely the Government and our citizens are not entitled to all the benefits of this enterprise. We get the ease, the security and the great saving of time; is it not illiberal and mean to ask the Company, whose enterprise gave us these, to surrender to us us also the pecuniary advantages of their success? SENATE....WASHINGTON, Thursday, May 1.

NICARAGUAN AFFAIRS.

Mr. WELLER submitted a resolution, calling on the President for any correspondence with our Minister to Nicaragua (not heretofore communicated) regarding the recognition of the new Nicaraguan Government.

MR. WELLER'S INTERVIEW OF WALKER.

Mr. WELLER said he was in the constant receipt of letters inquiring whether he sustained the policy of this nation with regard to the Nicaraguan Government. He now took occasion to remark that he entirely disagreed with that policy. If the Executive thought it expedient to reject Col. FRENCH on personal grounds, he thought the Nicaraguan Government should have been notified of that fact, and been officially recognized. The usual practice of this Government has been to recognize the South American Governments, whosoever was in power there. Those which lie on the route of the Pacific, especially, ought to be treated with courtesy and friendship. He did not desire to see Central America annexed to this Republic, but wanted a stable Government there, and this was only to be accomplished by the diffusion of Anglo-Saxon blood—he, therefore, thought that emigration to that country ought to be encouraged rather than discountenanced. He said that no man had been more shamefully misrepresented than General WALKER. He was not a freebooter, but a man of the purest motives.

BRITISH INTERFERENCE.

Mr. WELLER read a letter from Gen. WALKER, in which it is asserted that the British Government have interfered, in the present struggle between Costa Rica and Nicaragua, and have furnished the Costa Ricans with arms. A state of war now exists between these Governments. Costa Rica invaded Nicaragua, though she did not declare war against her, but against the Americans who aided the present party in power to subvert the old Government. Mr. WELLER, in allusion to the recent riot at Panama, said the best of feeling exists between this Government and the Government of New-Granada, and he had no doubt that the whole power of the latter would be exercised to bring the offenders to justice.

Mr. SEWARD remarked that, several weeks ago, on his motion, a resolution was adopted, calling on the President for information on this subject; but as there had been no response, the President probably had good reasons, in view of the complicated state of affairs, for delaying to answer the resolution.

Mr. WELLER replied that he was not aware of that fact, else he would not have offered this now.

Mr. SEWARD thought it was better to let the subject rest a day or two, as information concerning it was daily being received, and it was important that the President should be left free to exercise his discretion in this delicate matter.

Mr. DOUGLAS believed that the Clayton-Bulwer Treaty was being violated every day by Great Britain, and thought something ought to be done about it. He regarded the present Government of Nicaragua legitimate—as much so as the other existing Governments of Central America. It was the firmest and most stable Government there had been there since the throwing off of the Spanish yoke, and, so far as he knew, justice was more impartially administered, and the rights of man and property more sacredly guarded and protected under the existing Government than under any previous one. Nor was it any objection in his mind that an American by birth was in command of the Nicaraguan army. Nicaragua has as much right to become the asylum of emigrants from this country as we have to receive European emigrants. She had as much right to naturalize General WALKER as we did to do the same by General SHIELDS. Further, Nicaragua had as much right to send an American by birth Minister to this country as we have to send a man of foreign birth to represent us in the Courts of Spain, Italy or Holland. He believed we ought to enforce our neutrality laws, but not go a hair's breadth beyond the line of strict duty.

Mr. BUTLER thought we ought to be careful not to involve ourselves in a war with any nation through the acts of intermeddling adventurers.

Mr. WELLER withdrew the resolution.

THE RETIRING BOARD.

Mr. TOOMBS spoke in opposition to the action of the Naval Board, contending that the law was not properly executed, therefore the proceedings under it are void.

Kansas Affairs and the Massachusetts Legislature.

BOSTON, Thursday, May 1.

In the Senate, to-day, two reports were submitted from the Special Committee upon the question of Kansas affairs. The majority reported a series of resolutions which take strong Northern ground—denouncing the interference of the border ruffians, the bogus Territorial Legislature, its laws, and the course of the National Administration towards Kansas; declaring that Kansas should be admitted into the Union as a Free State, and commending the cause to the sympathy of the people of Massachusetts. The resolutions were ordered to a second reading.

The minority report, which is signed by two members of the Committee, maintains the legality of the Territorial Legislature and its laws, and fully sustains the doings of the Administration.

TERRIBLE CONFLAGRATION IN PHILADELPHIA.

Forty Stores and Dwellings Destroyed.

One Fireman Killed—Another Mortally Stabbed.

Estimated Loss over $1,000,000.

From the Philadelphia Evening Bulletin, Extra, May 1

Last night, about 12 o'clock, a fire broke out in the northern end of the large rag and paper warehouse of Messrs. JESUP & MOORE, on the south side of east North-street, below Sixth-street. The wind was blowing freshly from the north-east at the time, and the flames were carried through with fearful rapidity to the other extremity of the store, on Commerce-street. The large structure was speedily enveloped in flames, which were carried by the force of the wind against the buildings adjoining, and they were soon in a light blaze.

To add to the disastrous effects of the fire the burning rags and paper were vomited forth from the windows and carried on the wind in a southwesterly direction, where they fell in a fiery shower. The firemen were soon in service, but it was speedily manifest that all the buildings west of the paper store to Sixth-street, and south to Market-street, must be involved in destruction. The State House bell was immediately struck for a general alarm, and its constant strokes brought to the ground the entire Department of the city.

The worst fears were soon realized. The buildings on both sides of East North street, and upon both sides of Commerce-street, were soon in a light blaze, the Market-street stores extended back to the last named street, and the flames were soon pouring out of the windows on to that avenue and threatening to extend to Chestnut-street. By 2 o'clock, the Western end of the block bounded by Market, North and Sixth streets, was in flames, and the wind had carried the burning flakes into the block immediately west of the main body of the conflagration. Back of the western side of Sixth-street, a large school-house belonging to the Society of Friends, a carpenter shop, and several small dwellings, were in flames and burning furiously.

The roofs of two large stores on the lower side of Market-street, below Sixth, took fire, and the roofs of two buildings on the west side of Sixth-street, below Market, were in flames by 8½ o'clock.

The scene was now most frightful—the flames shot up high into the air, illuminating the entire city, and threatening to destroy entire blocks to the windward. Commerce and North streets were in flames, and fires were raging upon both sides of Market and Sixth streets. The wind, which was increasing in strength, was carrying a fiery shower to a great distance; all around the scene of devastation persons were hurrying away their families and their goods to places of safety. The firemen, bewildered and distracted at the insufficiency of the means at their command in comparison with the vastness of the field of exertion before them, struggled manfully with the destroying element, and under the judicious command of their officers did the best they could.

The fire continued to spread until after daylight, and when the sun rose, a sickening scene of destruction was exhibited. Every building on the north side of Market-street, from the unfinished iron structure at No. 19, to Sixth-street, was in ruins, and most of the houses on the east side of Sixth-street to North-street, were down. The western ends of North and Commerce streets were in ruins, while ugly gaps were made in the blocks south and west of the bounds described. Some 40 buildings were destroyed, many of them stores of great value.

FIREMAN KILLED.

Mr. JOHN R. GEOFF, a member of the Perseverance Hose Company, residing at No. 60 Race-street, while engaged at the fire, was crushed by falling walls, and instantly killed. His body was recovered, and the Coroner will hold an inquest this afternoon.

Mr. GEOFF was a returned volunteer, and had served in the Mexican war. He was not married.

MAN STABBED.

During the progress of the fire a row occurred in Sixth, above Market-street, between a number of the adherents of two of the fire companies, and in the course a young man, named JAMES BARTLEM, member of the Franklin Hose Company, was stabbed in the right breast, just above the nipple. He was conveyed to the Hospital, and it is supposed that there is no hope of his recovery.

THE PROPERTY DESTROYED.

Below we furnish a list of the property destroyed, so far as it can be ascertained in the confusion that exists. It is, of course, impossible at this time to give any definite idea of the losses, amount of insurance, &c., but it is roughly estimated that the loss will exceed a million of dollars.

MORNING SESSION—NOON EDITION.—No. 319 is an individual non-fireproof storehouse. The building was nearly so-designed, but it caught afterwards.

No. 321—A three-story brick store occupied by BARTLEY

Another Fire this Morning.

Between 6 and 7 o'clock this morning the State House bell struck for one hot fire further West, adding to the existing confusion.

It was discovered in the upper stories of the three-story brick and Market stores. The burning fellows fell upon the roof of the silk and fancy goods establishment of Messrs. John Wright & Sons, Nos. 32 and 34 Market-street, a few doors west of the building in which the fire originated. The building and stock of the firm named were destroyed.

The adjoining new store, No. 36 Market-street, owned by Mr. Caleb Cope, Merchant, was also destroyed. The stock was owned by Messrs. Brothers, Shaw & Co., and they were just moving into it. The building was owned by Mr. Cope, and was valued at $16,000. The insurance on the building was small, about $4,000. We learn that the greater part of it is insured.

On the east side of Sixth-street, from Market to the alley, every building was totally destroyed, and in many cases, the walls were much damaged. The loss on each building is supposed to be large, as the stocks were generally stored above them for safety.

Among the tenants in the upper stories of the three-story brick and Market stores were Messrs. Wright & Co., gentlemen's furnishing goods, Messrs. Brothers, Shaw & Co., gentlemen's furnishing goods, Robert Dunlap, hats, and Brothers, Shaw & Co., hats, and by G. C. Cooper, opened by William A. Beatty.

In Morris Court, west of the Friends' School for Girls, were located the Friends' School for Girls, owned by Mr. Henry Haines, and owned by the Society of Friends, considerably injured by the flames and water. Loss to building and furniture unknown.

The origin of the fire is variously stated. It was used in the spot where the flames started.

In the street it is confidently stated that it is utterly impossible to do more than to make an estimate of the amount of the loss. There are parties who incline to judge one of opinion that it will reach a million of dollars, while others go up to a round million and a quarter. We believe it will be inside of a million.

Further Particulars.

On the north side of Commerce-street, the loss is very heavy. The stock was owned by C. C. Cook, as a paper warehouse. The stock was valued at $40,000. The building belonged to Mr. Caleb Cope. Messrs. Jesup & Moore, paper manufacturers of this city, had a very large five-story building, filled with a number of machines, stocks of rags, and manufactures of the same. The building was valued at $40,000. Messrs. Jesup & Moore, manufacturers of rag-paper, occupied the building. Messrs. Arrival of the Water Witch from a Surveying Expedition up the Amazon—Movements of War Vessels.

Correspondence of the New-York Daily Times.

HAVANA, Friday, April 25, 1856.

My letters, yesterday, were in the mail sacks before I was aware of the arrival of the United States steamer Water Witch from survey and exploration of the River Amazon. She was last from Jamaica. After taking coal, enjoying the Havana "paseo," and our "plazas" and music for two or three days, she is to proceed home. I am informed that she is laden with much valuable data for the great interests of Art, Science and Commerce, drawn from the artery and shores of these regions which have been heretofore unknown to civilization. The reports, I presume, are already prepared for the State Department, so that you will shortly be in possession of the most important items. I presume that this will only open the way for the commercial filibustero, and that annexation will not be a consequence.

This expedition has never found favor in this quarter, but has been constantly assailed, without any defined cause for Spanish wrath. With the rest of the world, they will probably be as much benefited as the United States, if they have the intelligence to investigate and the energy to apply.

We have in port the French brig-of-war La Perouse, and the British Arab; the Powerful left yesterday, wearied with our oppressive hospitality. The proposed display by the French Consul-General was too much for Commodore MARCY, and he prudently withdrew himself from the triumphal ovation. The Illinois is to leave at 8 o'clock this morning—arrived last night.

Yellow Fever—Prospects of Another Revolution—Political News—Exciting Race of War Steamers—Excellence of the Peruvian Navy—The Suspected Privateer America at Valparaiso—A Lively Time.

Special Correspondence of the N. Y. Daily Times.

LIMA, Thursday, March 27, 1856.

As the steamer New-Granada is about sailing for Panama, I avail myself of the opportunity of dropping you a few lines, although there is not much to write about.

The Yellow Fever has been making some progress, both here and in Callao, for some time past, which has cast considerable gloom over the otherwise gay fiestas of the season, and many people who can spare the time, have betaken themselves to Chorillos, a watering-place about nine miles distant, in the hope of avoiding the pesta. The fever is, however, of a light type, and so far has carried off but few victims.

The political world is in a most deplorable state here, with the fearful prospect of another revolution before long.

The Senate is framing a new Constitution under the special direction of President CASTILLO, which may possibly be concluded in two months, and probably never. Should it ever arrive at maturity, the Republic will be at once turned into a dictatorship, with CASTILLO at its head. And "then comes the tug of war." ECHENIQUE is in Valparaiso, where he has been well received; both he and his party are perfectly used up in Peru. Poor old DOMINGO ELIAS is thought to be on his death-bed, and is not likely ever to be able to enter the arena again; and although there are many other aspirants for power, and opponents to CASTILLO, yet he appears to have all the chances of final success in his favor, being, in fact, by far the most able ruler in the country.

There was quite an interesting trial of speed at Callao on the 13th, between the French frigate Perseverance, Her British Majesty's frigate Monarch, Peruvian screw frigate Apurimac, and the United States sloop-of-war St. Mary's; the Apurimac having her screw triced up, and sailing under canvas.

The four vessels got under way about noon, and well together, the Monarch taking the lead from the anchorage, and the Apurimac the last. After they were fully under way the Monarch fell astern of the whole fleet, and kept there; the Perseverance and St. Mary's neck and neck until they rounded the point, when the heavy head sea threw the latter back, the former, owing to her superior size and weight, going steadily ahead; then the Apurimac came along in beautiful style, close on the heels of the French Admiral, leaving both Brother Jonathan and John Bull as whippers-in. The race lasted until sundown, when the vessels parted company, the Frenchman ahead, the Peruvian close astern, the Yankee about six miles in their wake and the British Lion 'nowhere.' Captain BAILEY still reckons that he can whip the best of them or thereabouts, provided he gets the right sort of a wind, admitting, however, to a fair beat this time, and feeling perfectly satisfied at outsailing the British seventy-four.

The Commercio, alluding to the affair, says it is conseling to know that if the Peruvians can't beat the balance in fighting, they certainly can in running away.

Talking of frigates, it may be interesting to know that the Apurimac is the most splendid-looking vessel-of-war that ever entered these waters, and certainly superior to anything in the American Navy. Peru has now no less than seven war steamers, five of which are first-class, and all in fine order.

The Perseverance sailed for Paita, thence to Central America; the St. Mary's for Panama, and the Monarch for Valparaiso.

There is an unusually small fleet of merchant vessels in Callao and the Chinchas at present, and business is said to be dull.

Freights to Europe and San Francisco.....@20
Freights to New-York.....18

The Boston ship Winfield Scott arrived at Callao yesterday with a cargo of Ice, in 119 days.

By the arrival of the steamer Lima, from Valparaiso on the 27th, we have accounts of a terrible norther there, which, however, did not commit the usual amount of damage among the shipping. Heavy rains, at the same time, have caused much injury to the crops.

The steamer America, Capt. HUNSON, had arrived at Valparaiso from New-York, and was sharply looked after by the Allies. It appears that Mr. ANTHONY BUCKLEY, Her B. M.'s Consul at New-York, did not make a sufficient fool of himself in the affair of the ship Maury, but he must also interfere with the America, and has sent out circulars all along the coast, stating that he has learned, from an authentic source, that a new steamer, called the America, of 1,500 tons, heavily armed, flat decks, great beams, light draft, immense speed, &c., had sailed from New-York, for the Pacific, as a Russian privateer, with guns and ammunition stowed away under her coal, and advising that when fallen in with she should be overhauled and made a prize of. The steamer Lima carried these instructions from Panama down the coast, and her jolly old Commander, CHEVERUSH, who was of course, fully posted as to the intelligence, [illegible] his "breakfast" with joyful delight on his return the part of Valparaiso on the morning of the 6th inst., and, rounding the stern of the America, received a hearty "Hello, old Bachard! how are you?" from Captain HUNSON, to which he answered, with a significant "my old cock," chuckling in an undertone to himself, "you dam'd Yankee pirate, now I've got you."

"Old Blow," as we will call him for short, then proceeded with all speed to let go anchor, lower gig, and go on shore, where with all the dignity of a man about to serve his country and sacrifice his friend, he penned a lengthy and loyal document to the defenders of her Britannic Majesty and the Emperor of the French, lying in the bay, and to the representatives of Great Britain and France, at Santiago, letting them into the secret, and pointing out the necessity of at once pounding upon the poor Yankee, throwing overboard her armament and having her sent to the territory of her owners and owners at the bottom, to make a prisoner of Capt. HUNSON and a prize of his steamer, as part and parcel of the Russian pirate fleet in the Pacific, and as a just, legal and actually necessary proceeding on the part of the Allies. The finale had not transpired when the Lima sailed, but preparations were in rapid progress to carry out the scheme at the time of her departure. "Old Blow," when speaking of the affair, and of his own energy in helping them promptly to defeat the combined wicked designs of the Yankees and the Russians, was heavily knocked down by another, when it came out that Valparaiso, being a neutral port, might be, by all some little obstacle to the sending of the America there, or the seizure after arrival if she [illegible] Russian bear on the bowsprit and a —— on the [illegible] and by night not one military house will be occupied between the Wharf and Cavalero. A SPICY LETTER FROM FRANCIS P. BLAIR.

The Democracy Sold Out to the Calhoun Nullifiers.

How the Nullifiers Originated—What they Threatened and what they Did.

A HIT AT BUCHANAN.

LETTER FROM F. P. BLAIR, ESQ., TO THE NEW-YORK REPUBLICANS.

SILVER SPRING, April 26, 1856.

GENTLEMEN: It is grateful to me to receive an invitation to unite in your effort to restore the patriotism of the time when Republicans of every party were arrayed in opposition to the sinister designs of the nullifiers of the South.

They are more formidable now than ever. They have an administration installed at Washington to aid their plots, which, receiving its power from the Democracy, has betrayed its organization—its name, and the accumulated confidence gathered around it, by the labors of the illustrious restorers of the principles derived from JEFFERSON, together with the authority it conferred on those intrusted with the Government, to assist the worst enemy of its cause.

To use a homely phrase, "the Democracy has been sold out" to Mr. CALHOUN's nullifying party; a party which owes its origin to artful appeals made by him to the slaveholding interest, operating on the fears of some, the avarice and ambition of others.

A brief account of the rise of this party will be useful, as explaining the source of its power and of the present troubles of the country.

Mr. CALHOUN, after failing in his effort to attain the Presidency, by the exclusive support of Southern interests to manufacturing cupidity, in the first protective Tariff, which he contributed to enact, changed his tactics, and devoted his life to achieve the object of his ambition by consolidating the Slave Power through appeals to its interests. He reversed his tariff policy, and pronounced the protective system robbery of the South. Agriculture was indeed everywhere oppressed by an excessive tariff, but Mr. CALHOUN and his partisans insisted that the whole burden fell on the South, although the North paid double the duties paid by the South.

His own and Mr. MCDUFFIE's powerful appeals persuaded South Carolina that the Union was a mischief to her, and that, as a central seaboard State, she would prosper more as the head of the Southern Confederacy than as a little slave oligarchy in the midst of great Republican Commonwealths, then looking to the gradual progress of free principles, for aggrandisement.

The more prosperous States of the South, although hostile to the tariff, would not adopt Mr. CALHOUN's nullification for redress. His attempt to identify General JACKSON's administration with South Carolina principles proved abortive. The plan to effect it was ingeniously contrived. A dinner, in honor of JEFFERSON's birthday, was the occasion devised to inaugurate the administration and the doctrine of nullification together. The sentiments prepared for promulgation with this view were laid by the side of the new President's plate, to receive his sanction, but they met his reprobation in the famous toast: "The Federal Union must be preserved"—which he inscribed on the paper. Mr. CALHOUN's next step was to bring South Carolina alone into the arena, to defy the General Government and brook civil war, relying on the sympathy of the Slave States to unite in his cause, or common cause with her when coerced by the General Government. This hazardous plan of combining the slaveholding power in a war upon the Union, fell under the proclamation and the force bill.

Mr. CALHOUN did not abandon, under this defeat, his favorite design of embodying the South as a section, to command the North or separate from it. The cry that Slavery was in danger was his next rallying cry. The names of TAPPAN, GARRISON, and other speculative enthusiasts, who argued the cause of the African race, in the hope of reaching the feelings and consciences of those who had the power of giving them freedom, were made the watchwords of his party. Mr. CALHOUN endeavored to impress the feeling that these movements portended the invasion of the rights of Southern slave-owners by the power of the Northern States. There was not the slightest pretext for the apprehension. The great majority in all the Free States condemned interference with the domestic institutions of the South. Even discussion of the subject, with a view to moral effect, was in the northern cities frowned down. But Mr. CALHOUN was not content with this demonstration of public feeling in the Free States. His next move was to convoke a sectional convention of all States holding slaves, for the purpose of [illegible] the Southern Confederacy [illegible] and treasy and he declared that [illegible] dissolve the Union, unless the North should [illegible] to suppress the freedom of speech and of the press if employed by its citizens in [illegible] the mischiefs of Slavery. This extraordinary movement to enforce the prosecution of free opinion in one section by demanding penal enactments, menacing a revolt in the other, on failure to comply, had the desired effect. It gave importance to the Abolitionists, which it is impossible they would otherwise have acquired. Multitudes were ready to defend the freedom of speech, who were strongly opposed to the abuse of it.

The legislatures of the North would not prosecute at Mr. CALHOUN's bidding. He then appealed to Congress to suppress the circulation of what he called the "incendiary" tracts of the Abolitionists, and introduced a bill supported by a long report, to enforce a sort of censorship over every publication lodged in the mail. All were to be suppressed that could be construed as affecting Slavery. Mr. CALHOUN denounced a separation of the Union as the necessary consequence of the failure of this measure. It failed as an enactment, but did not fail to increase the agitation which it was designed to provoke.

Then followed the era of petitions from the North, which were multiplied as repulses to the insults heaped upon their authors, by Mr. CALHOUN and his Southern coadjutors. They, in turn, avenged themselves upon the petitions by denunciatory speeches, by refusing to print, by laying them upon the table without reading, by subjecting them to every species of parliamentary contempt. All this exasperation, which Mr. CALHOUN had taken such an active share in propagating throughout the class with which he identified himself, did not compass his object.

The great body of the people, North and South, saw that he aimed to reach the Presidency by combining the whole vote of the South in his favor, and putting it in the attitude of abandoning the Union, unless the North would call the great nullifier to the Chief Magistracy to prevent it. The intrigue of selfish ambition was so apparent in all its management that Mr. CALHOUN could not unite the South in his support. It valued the Union much more than it did Mr. CALHOUN, and would not put it in jeopardy to make the experiment he proposed. It saw, too, that there was not the slightest inclination on the part of any Northern State to trespass on the rights of their brethren of the South—that the panic about incendiary documents was a mere feint—that all the Abolition pamphlets were but waste paper. If they had any effect, it was to make the master more severe, and the slave more servile.

Having in vain tried to make the subserviency of the slaveholder throughout the South pander to his selfish designs, as it did in South Carolina, mischance at last gave Mr. CALHOUN the opportunity to touch a chord, to which the feelings of slave-owners everywhere responded. It awakened the ambition of the whole oligarchy of the South. The conquest of new dominions for Slavery touched the fibre in the heart, which, unhappily for the peace of mankind, is too much alive in every bosom. Mr. CALHOUN, as the head of Mr. TYLER's Administration (a place which was opened to him by the hand of death) urged the annexation of Texas, as offering a field to the South for the propagation of Slavery, and opening its way to indefinite extension towards the West. He seized the occasion to address a letter to Lord ABERDEEN, declaring this to be the purpose of the annexation, and another to Mr. KING, our Minister to France, in which he expatiated upon the advantages of Slavery. Thus offering, in the eyes of all Europe, an insult to the honest principles on which our Revolutionary Fathers and the authors of the Constitution founded our Government.

These patriots would not allow the word slave to be found in our Constitution. They provided for the extinction of the slave-trade as a piracy. They prohibited it from every territory belonging to the Union. Mr. CALHOUN coveted new territories only to afford room for its expansion, and made it his shameless boast to the world, that the power we had acquired as freemen, under the lead of patriots, who had shed their blood to establish the principle that "all men were born free and equal," was now to be employed to spread Slavery over a continent. Here, for the first time, Mr. CALHOUN succeeded in drawing to his purposes the whole slaveholding interest, as well without as within South Carolina.

The ambition of conquest, especially, in those taught to dominate in their earliest arms, cannot resist the tempting invitation to take cheap glory and rich spoils from a weak people. Besides, we had a claim to Texas. It was already a Slave State, and it was not then suspected that Mr. CALHOUN looked beyond its annexation to take new provinces, and extend Slavery into Mexico. His avowed principle, therefore, was supposed to be limited by the present wants to which they were immediately applicable, and men who had no thought of conquering Mexico to convert it again into a land of slaves, readily participated in bringing Texas into the Union. The scheme was then matured, the consequences of which are now before us, and which can be seen in South Carolina, has declared, in the House of Representatives, hatred to the description of Mexicans, Northern men and Germans.

The annexation of Texas produced the war with Mexico which fully developed the ambition of the slave holding interest for extended dominion. It was not satisfied with the acquisition of the rich [illegible] of Texas. It was not satisfied with the pledge given by Congress that four additional Slave States should be created out of territory conquered from Mexico, between [illegible] and the Rio Grande, and other territory lying along the line of [illegible] to Rio Mexico. Mr. CALHOUN and his partisans determined to sever the Union. California was not admitted as a Free State on demand of the citizens, unless all of New Mexico were opened to Slavery.

It is proper to look back to the successful means employed by Mr. CALHOUN and his friends, which enabled them to press such arrogant demands. Mr. CALHOUN had made the slaveholders a perfect Southwa phalanx, by making it manifest that thorough concert of action among them was essential to achieve their contemplated conquest; and it was also impressed, as another prerequisite, that they must have control of the Federal Administration, and to accomplish this, a combination of personal interests must be contrived, to dissolve the adhesion of party principles. With these ends, Mr. CALHOUN, the actual head of Mr. TYLER's Administration, called a convention of delegates, appointed by the office-holders in all the States, to meet at Baltimore contemporaneously with the Democratic Convention chosen to nominate a successor to Mr. TYLER. The Texas question was employed to produce a schism in the Democratic Convention, a majority of which had been instructed to announce Mr. VAN BUREN as its candidate for the Presidency. The two-thirds rule was adopted to defeat his nomination.

It is now avowed by one of the South Carolina delegation, that Mr. POLK owed his nomination to Mr. CALHOUN's friends. Colonel PICKENS and Mr. ELMORE, from South Carolina, attended as delegates, and laid their credentials on the table, but did not become members, preserving to stand aloof, and not be bound by the decision of the body. While exerting their influence to control the result, they intimated that unless the man they would support should become the candidate, the nullifiers who controlled the Texas movement would defeat his election. Pledges were made on all sides, and Mr. POLK was nominated. But to make sure that the pledges of Mr. POLK's friends would be faithfully redeemed, Mr. TYLER's nomination, which was made in the Convention of office-holders, then at hand and in session, was proclaimed and held in suspense, to be resorted to in case of faltering on the part of Mr. POLK. The skill with which Mr. CALHOUN, sitting in his cabinet, managed this double nomination between a President in esse, and a President in futuro, for the same place, gives admirable proof of his dexterity in political intrigue. The point he had in view was, to make the power which he could enable Mr. TYLER to wield over the vote of the South, extort from Mr. POLK whatever concessions the nullifiers might demand, as the price of Mr. TYLER's withdrawal, to secure Mr. POLK's election.

The Editor of the Globe knew nothing of the secret negotiations pending between Messrs. POLK, CALHOUN and TYLER, during the three months that Mr. TYLER kept the field, nor, indeed, until after the inauguration of Mr. POLK. He did not understand why Mr. CALHOUN, just at that time got up public meetings through the South, proclaiming a secession from the Union, unless the tariff of 1842 was abandoned. It was the tocsin to draw out the train bands of nullification, to enable Mr. TYLER to threaten Mr. POLK with opposition in that quarter. The Editor of the Globe denounced this movement, and the abuses of Mr. TYLER's Administration, because Mr. CALHOUN's friends, who were connected with them, professed to be friends of Mr. POLK. Had not the Globe taken a course to show that there was no collusion between Mr. POLK and the authors of what so offended the public, the election would have been lost. Mr. CALHOUN thus compelled the Globe to take the course which gave a pretext for Mr. TYLER to complain of its conductor, and to appeal to Mr. POLK to make a pledge that it should not be the organ of his Administration in case Mr. TYLER withdrew to secure his election, but that he would appoint one favorable to Mr. CALHOUN and himself, in consideration of the sacrifice of their present prospects to his success.

This was the mode in which Mr. CALHOUN reached his great desideratum. At last he had succeeded in making a thorough combination among the slaveowners of the South, animated by his cause by the hope of new conquests, and he had obtained in advance a guaranty of authority over the official organ of the Executive, as a hostage, to control the succeeding administration.

To show the importance which Mr. CALHOUN attached to the command of the official organ of the Democracy at Washington will require some detail and proof. This may be tedious; but as all the existing troubles of the country are to be traced to the disorganization and overthrow of that party, and the substitution of the powers of the nullifiers in its stead, although prolix, personal, and somewhat savoring of egotism, the developement may be excused as necessary.

Mr. RIVES says, in a correspondence of his with Mr. RITCHIE, in January, 1841: "A gentleman of high standing (Col. PICKENS) warned me, and through me Mr. BLAIR, that he intended to use all honorable means to get rid of him as editor of the Globe, on account of his opposition to Southern men and Southern measures." This conversation, between Col. PICKENS and Mr. RIVES, took place in Washington, on his way home from the Baltimore Convention, where he had contributed to the nomination of Mr. POLK. To accomplish this purpose he had made a visit to Mr. POLK, in Tennessee, on his way home. The purpose of which is disclosed in the following passage of a letter from Mr. POLK to Gen. JACKSON, dated,

"COLUMBIA, July 22, 1844.

MY DEAR SIR: I received on yesterday the inclosed letter from Mr. Senator WALKER, of Mississippi. I have communicated its contents, confidentially, to my friend, Gen. PILLOW, who will hand you this letter, and who will confer with you in regard to the steps proper to be taken, if anything should be done in reference to its suggestions. Gen. PILLOW is my friend, and an honorable and reliable man, with whom you may safely communicate freely.

The object which Mr. WALKER desires to attain is an important one and yet occupying the position which I do, it is one of so much delicacy that I do not see how I could write on the subject to any one. I submit it to your better judgment what you may deem it proper to do. The main object in the way of Mr. T.'s withdrawal seems to be the course of the Globe towards himself and his friends. There is certainly no necessity for the Globe to continue its attacks upon him or his administration. A separate TYLER ticket might put in jeopardy the vote of several closely contested States, and perhaps affect the final result. Surely Mr. BLAIR, of the Globe, can be induced to cease his war upon the administration during the pendency of the contest at least."

It will be seen, that nothing more of the dealing between Mr. POLK and Mr. TYLER's Cabinet was here revealed than the wish that the editor of the Globe should "be induced to cease his war upon the administration during the pendency of the contest at least;" the circumstances, then concealed, have since come to light, showing that a bargain was then struck, that the Globe's war should cease forever, and that an organ, friendly to Mr. CALHOUN, should be substituted for the Globe. These disclosures were first indicated subsequently to Mr. POLK's election, by approaches to General JACKSON, to reconcile him to the abandonment of the Democratic organ which he had established at Washington, as a bulwark against the machinations of Mr. CALHOUN, to destroy the integrity of the Union, to effect which, the Press, of DUFF GREEN, had been first devoted by him. Not a breath as to the motives of Colonel PICKENS's visit to Mr. POLK (which followed immediately after the letter of Mr. WALKER to Mr. POLK, containing the proposals of Mr. TYLER's withdrawal,) was suffered to reach the ears of General JACKSON; but after the election in December, rumors of a design to make a change in the organ reached him through General ARMSTRONG, who was sent to break it to him. General ARMSTRONG, though affecting to sympathize with General JACKSON's feelings and wishes, was, in fact, entirely devoted to Mr. POLK, and shared in all his collusion with CALHOUN and TYLER, and was rewarded for it first by the Irish consulate at Liverpool, and reaped his last harvest as editor of the Union, in the service of the nullifiers. General JACKSON divulges what Gen. ARMSTRONG represented as rumor, but what was really the concocted plans settled upon the coalition of CALHOUN, TYLER and POLK, in a letter dated Hermitage, 14th December, 1844, in which he says:

* * * * "Our mutual friend, Gen. ROBERT ARMSTRONG, spents part of yesterday with me, from whom I confidentially learned some movements of some of our Democratic friends, not of the sound stamp, which would at once separate the Democratic party and destroy POLK, and would of course drive you from the support of POLK's administration and separate the Democratic party. I forthwith wrote Col. POLK upon the subject, and am sure he will view it as I do, a wicked and concerted movement for Mr. CALHOUN's and Mr. TYLER's political benefit. It is this to amalgamate the Madisonian and what was the Spectator and make that paper the organ of the Government to the exclusion of the Globe. I am sure POLK, when he hears it, will feel as indignant at the plot as I do. I will vouch for one thing, and that is that Mr. CALHOUN will not be one of POLK's cabinet, nor any aspirant to the Presidency. This is believed to spring from Mr. RIVES's brain, inoculated into the brain of some of our pretended democratic politicians who want to be great men, but will never reach that height.

As your friend on the political watchtower I give you this confidential information, and be silence and care you will soon find the secret movers of this weak and wicked measure, that would at once divide and dismember the Republican party, and dissolve it—unless the measures we have adopted here may put it down, you will soon see the movement in Washington, and I hope, if attempted, the whole Democracy will rally around the Globe and prostrate the viper forever. This intrigue puts me in mind of Mr. CALHOUN's treachery to me, and will worthy of a disciple of his.

But there is another project on foot as void of good name and benefit to the Democratic cause as the other, but not as wicked, proceeding from weak and inexperienced minds. It is this: to bring about a partnership between you and Mr. RITCHIE, you to continue proprietor and RITCHIE the editor. This, to me, is a most extraordinary counsel, coming from any well informed mind or experienced politician. It is true Mr. RITCHIE is an experienced editor, but sometimes goes off at half-cock before he sees the whole ground, and does the party great injury before he sees his error, and then has great difficulty to get back into the right track again. Without his course occasioned of the desertion and how much injury he did at Baltimore, he got into the right track again. Another point you are to be made when he went off with RIVES and the Conservatives and advocated for the safe keeping of the public revenue special deposites in the State banks, as if we the Democratic party were ashamed of our Democracy, especially if special deposits in corrupt banks than in general deposits in such as was sometime before this great security could be had out of the mint.

These are voluntary measures of what I call weak politicians, who suppose them, but who wish to become great men, and who, if they could, would sell out their party, faithfully should betrayed, be it lost; but I have no fears but that he will, and being informed confidentially of the movement, may have it in his power to put it all down.

[illegible]

From a succession of letters, which I received from him in the months of March and April, it is evident he was constantly exerting his influence to avert the mischief, to what he called the "Republican Party," threatened in the surrender of the State by Mr. POLK, and the adoption of the CALHOUN organ to represent his Administration. The following letter, of the 9th of April, exhibits the whole dramatis personæ engaged in the intrigue. It is given in full. The names appear in this letter, and the attendant circumstances throw light on the whole transaction:

HERMITAGE, April 9, 1845.

MY DEAR MR. BLAIR: I have been quite sick for several days—my feet and legs much swollen, and it has reached my hands and abdomen, and it may be that my life ends in dropsy. All means hitherto used to stay the swelling have now failed to check it—be it so. I am fully prepared to say the Lord's will be done. My mind, since ever I heard of the attitude the President had assumed with you as Editor of the Globe, which was the most unexpected thing I ever met with, my mind has been troubled, and it was not only unexpected by me, but his shown less good common sense by the President that any act of his life, and calculated to divide instead of uniting the Democracy, which appears to be his reason for trying this useless and foolish measure at the very threshold of his Administration, and when everything appeared to augur well for, to him, a prosperous Administration. The President, here, before he set out for Washington, must have been listening to the secret counsels of some political clique, such as CALHOUN or TYLER cliques, (for there are such here,) or after he reached Washington some of the secret friends of some of the aspirants must have gotten hold of his ear and spoiled his common sense, or he never would have made such a movement, so excellent for, and well calculated to sever the Democracy, by calling down upon himself sunshine by the act to secretly favoring some of the political aspirants who are looking to the succession for some favorite. I have in my confidential letters, and particularly that of the 4th instant, brought fully to his view, by my plain common sense way, his duties, and ask if he, in the exercise of his patriotic duties, as you—to the real democracy, that sustained my administration and Mr. VAN BUREN's.

I brought to his view, that when I entered upon the duties of the administration of the Government, DUFF GREEN was the Democratic editor whose object was to beat the executive chair by me for Mr. CALHOUN. He was the executive organ until I found he was doing my administration injury and dividing the Democratic party, that the Globe, with you its editor, took Duff Green's place. That you and Colonel POLK [illegible] sustaining all my measures, foreign and domestic, and went hand in hand with me sustaining his Administration—united to his support for a second term—have ever since the Colonel's name was announced as the nominee of the Baltimore Convention you have given him an undeviating support, and I have fully explained to him how your paper had been drawn away from your own matured views on the Texas question. I then concluded by asking him what excuse can he give to the old substantial JACKSON and VAN BUREN Democracy for not letting you and your paper go on as his organ until you are in some fault, and then, as I did DUFF GREEN, tur you away. I ask, have you (the Colonel) any new principles other than those you have always advocated, and set forth in your inaugural, to bring before the people, that you think will be more popular, that at the very threshold of your administration you have repudiated BLAIR and his Globe from being your organ? I know this cannot be the case, therefore am entirely lost to conjecture any good cause for your unaccountable course to Mr. BLAIR, and wind up, telling him there is but one safe course to pursue, revise his course, send for you, and direct you not to interfere with the organ of his administration, give you all his confidence, and all would be well and end well. This is the substance; and I had a hope on the receipt of this letter, and some others written by mutual friends, would have restored all things to harmony and confidence again. I rested on this hope until the 7th when I received a letter of Mr. BLAIR, of the confidential letters from the President directed to be laid before me, from which it would seem that the purchase of the Globe, and to get clear of you, as editor, is the great absorbing question before the President. Well, who is to be the purchaser? Mr. RITCHIE and Major A. J. DONELSON to edit. Query, are to the latter. The above question I have asked the President. Is that renegade politician, CAMMON, who boasts of his $60,000 to set up a new paper, to be one of them?—who is a bankrupt in politics, and who got elected Senator by selling himself to the Whigs, and could not raise $7,000 to be one of the proprietors to unite the Democracy. His very election had divided them in Pennsylvania, and a letter to me says he has done our national friend Buchanan much injury, he being charged with using secretly his influence to effect it; or would CAMMON's ownership in partnership HOUSE, KANE, LEITER, DALLAS, and a host of other old time Democrats in your expulsion? Third debtor? Is Major W. LEWIS, of Tennessee, to be the purchaser? Here it is stated he is vastly incumbered with debts; by many a perfect bankrupt. Who is to purchase, and where is the money to come from? Is Dr. WILLIAM GWIN, the satellite of CALHOUN, the great friend of R. J. WALKER, Secretary of Treasury, a perfect bankrupt in property? My own opinion is, that the contract made, the money cannot be raised, and the Globe cannot be bought. What then? The President will find himself in a dilemma, have to apologize, and the Globe be the organ, and RITCHIE will return, not so well satisfied with the sagacity of the Administration as when he left Richmond. These are my speculations. I may be in error. I would like to know what portion of the Cabinet are supporting and advising the President to this course, where nothing but injury can result to him in the end, and division in his Cabinet, arising from jealousy. What political clique is to be benefited? My dear friend, let me have all the Cabinet, and what the movement on this subject. How loathsome it is to me to see an old friend laid aside, principles of justice and friendship forgotten, and all for the sake of policy—and the great Democratic Party divided or endangered for policy—and that a mere imaginary policy, that must tend to divide the Great Democratic Party, while the Whigs are secretly rejoicing at the prospects of division in our ranks. I declare to you, it is a course that common sense forbade the adoption, when the Administration was entering on its career with so much harmony and prospect of success. I cannot reflect upon it with any calmness; every point of it, upon scrutiny, turns up deformity and disorder, and not one beneficial result can be expected from it. I will be anxious to know the result. If harmony is restored, and the Globe the organ, I will rejoice, if sold, to whom, and for what.

This may be the last letter I may be able to write you; but live or die, I am your friend, (and never deserted one from policy,) and leave my papers and reputation in your keeping. As far as justice is due to my fame, I know you will shield it. I ask no more. I rest upon truth, and require nothing but what truth will note to me. All my household join me in kind wishes for your health and happiness, and that of all your family; and that you may triumph over all enemies. May God's choicest blessings be bestowed upon you and yours through life, is the prayer of your sincere friend. ANDREW JACKSON.

F. P. BLAIR, Esq.

The first slight glimpse of the completion of the arrangement here fully developed between the triumvirates had been given immediately after Col. PICKENS had made his visit to Col. POLK. A Convention of Mr. POLK's friends assembled soon afterwards at Nashville, and adopted the course of the Globe in regard to the nullification meetings in South Carolina.

"It repelled said Mr. POLK's Nashville organ, Mr. NICHOLSON's paper, I believe,) the charge of disunion against the real Democracy with indignation and contempt," &c. The moment after the return of Col. PICKENS to South Carolina, the nullification outcry was hushed. The confederates thus united, looked upon it as a common interest to quiet the North's apprehensions in regard to the disunion tendencies of Mr. POLK's new allies. Mr. PICKENS' successful mission was immediately followed by Mr. LONGS's withdrawal from the canvass.

An arrangement having been thus ratified between the contracting parties for an official organ in the interest of the nullifying party, in the event of Mr. POLK's election, the treasury of the United States, on the 4th day of November, 1844, (signs them manifesting the strongest probability of Mr. POLK's election,) placed $50,000 in Mr. CAMMON's Bank, at a village nine miles from Harrisburg, to make provision for the purchase of the press. The election over, Mr. CAMMON, in pursuance of the arrangement, informed Mr. DONELSON he had the money at his disposal, and he was invited by the President to avail himself of it to purchase the Globe, or establish another press at Wash-

[illegible] Democracy, which Gen. JACKSON's intuitive sagacity foresaw would be the offspring of the political alliance of CALHOUN, TYLER, and POLK. Among the last letters

The Black Warrior Affair Again—M. Soulé and Señor de Lersundi—Spanish Generosity and Honor for the United States—Gallantry of the Spanish Commander.

Translated from the Madrid Nacional of April 6, for the New-York Daily Times.

Like that old nursery tale of the "sixty-six kings, all ranged in battle array," which, as it is a matter of taste is repeated interminably, the Heraldo renews again, yesterday, the subject of the Black Warrior.

It is not necessary to be very acute in order to suspect in the bad humor and innocent malice with which the article is written, the hand of some neglected diplomatist, who embodies thus his griefs. Remarks, however, as we have always been in making personal affairs questions of public interest, we will waive the consideration of private interest which may have led the writer in the Heraldo to disfigure the facts, and to show so much unjust irritation against persons.

We will make a show of believing, as well as we possibly can, that the article was written in all seriousness, in order to defend the national honor, and not the interests of a friend or a political faction, and we will reply to the Heraldo, supposing the author or procurer of the article, however, to take the answer all to himself.

We have not been, certainly, among those who, when Mr. SOULÉ was in power, partook of his favors, nor have we been lenient towards his mistakes. More than once, during his ministerial course, we have laid our ferule over his rigid hand, to make it more flexible to the progress of our times; but in this case the question is precisely concerning one of the acts in which the Government, and above all Señor DE LERSUNDI, have manifested their liberal tendency and their love of justice. The settlement of the Black Warrior affair was not merely a solution, more or less happy, given to an international difficulty, it was a judgment by which the liberal Government has condemned explicitly the tyrannical system pursued heretofore by other Governments in the administration of Cuba. It was not only the giving of due and decorous satisfaction to the party who rightly claimed it, but it was a chastisement to those who, by their insensate conduct, had made that satisfaction necessary.

The state of our relations with the Government of Washington was not bad because of the ill-will of the American people towards us, but because of the hate of the Norteros and the antipathy of the Pensilos towards that people—a hate and an antipathy which have served as a pretext for adventurers to foment a war.

The craft of the Moderados being accustomed to navigate according to the breeze from France, all friendship with more liberal peoples was thought unnecessary and pernicious; and so our international policy, so affectionate and submissive for some, was hard and peevish towards others. And does the España now cry out, because we wish that policy to be equally just towards all nations?

The affair of the Black Warrior, was only one of the many blunders committed in Cuba by General PEZUELA, in accordance with the policy of the Moderados. The complaint of the outrage done to this vessel of the Union was presented by Mr. SOULÉ when DON LOUIS SARTORIUS was Prime Minister, and it is easy to understand how he should not disapprove the conduct of PEZUELA as well as how CALDERON DE LA BARCA should not dare to think what his Chief had not thought.

It is said that the brusque manner in which Mr. SOULÉ presented the complaint, contributed much to this firmness on the part of SARTORIUS, and this appears to us very probable; because whatever may be our antagonism to some politicians of this country, we do not deny to any one, as does the España to Señor DE LERSUNDI, the dignity of a Spaniard. SARTORIUS might have repulsed SOULÉ for this reason; we do not doubt it, but what we say completely sure of it, and so is the España, although it affects to be ignorant, is that Señor PACHECO, and after him Señor LERSUNDI also repulsed him with dignity and energy. It is only by being in the secret of why it may be convenient to the writer in the España to say that the Government yielding to the menaces of Mr. SOULÉ had given a satisfaction to the United States, that we can explain to ourselves why he should fail in such a way to the truth of the facts.

It is impossible that the España ignores what all the world knows already from the documents published in the Anglo-American press and in the Spanish press. Why did Monsieur SOULÉ present his resignation and leave his post without waiting even his letters of recall, if not because, as he himself says in his resignation published on account of the "inexplicable tranquillity" to which she found himself reduced near our Government? Not only did Mr. SOULÉ not obtain the satisfaction which the España supposes, but not even so much as an answer to his menacing reclamations. The proof of this is found in the following document, published a year since:

Mr. Soulé to Mr. Marcy.

LEGATION OF THE UNITED STATES,
MADRID, Jan. 19, 1855.

SIR: The present rulers of Spain do not show themselves any more inclined than were their predecessors to attend to our grievances and to do justice to our demands.

Neither has their compunction been awakened by the scorching arguments I was instructed to place in their hands, nor their supineness disconcerted by the significant suggestions of the President in his Message to Congress.

They look at both with perfect indifference, and do not as much as trouble themselves even with resorting to soft words and empty protestations to lull our complaints into quiescence.

My position under such a state of things has become so unendurable, that I doubt seriously whether it will be in my power to delay even a few weeks my return home. I long indeed to be off from a Court where so little respect is paid to our country and where the opinion entertained of our weakness is a constant encouragement to offer us fresh and indescribable disgusts.

I have not had a word from Mr. LERSUNDIA concerning the disposition of Her Majesty's present Government towards us since I left with him a copy of your dispatch of the 23d June. Nevertheless, I will not depart from here without attempting to ascertain, in a free conference with him, what we are to expect for the future.

I have the honor to be, &c., PIERRE SOULÉ.
To Hon. WM. L. MARCY, Sec'y of State.

Well, the diplomatist who wrote that to his Government departed without having obtained an answer. How does the España dare to print errors which are corrected beforehand by this and that other press?

But if the España has been so blind as not to read the official communications published and republished, is it also so deaf as not to hear the speech with which Señor LERSUNDIA replied to the speech of Señor ORDAX AVECILLA, on this same subject of the Black Warrior?

We will copy some lines from the official Gazette of May 1, 1855:

"The Government of Her Majesty was resolved to do justice, but did not choose to have it imposed upon them.

"Then happened the departure of that Minister, (SOULÉ,) who certainly wished to give it the air of a measure, if not hostile at least, which could appear very much like it, and nevertheless it was no more than an ordinary proceeding. His policy had come to be in conflict with that of his Government; he had presented his resignation and it had been accepted, and in accepting it, that Government expressed itself in the same terms of good understanding and good friendship with the Spanish Government.

"So that, Sir, the Spanish Government in view of the communication of the 23d June, which it had received on the 6th of December, in view of the terms in which the orders of the Queen of the Representative of the United States at Madrid was effected, confirmed all this by the language entirely conformed to that of his Government, of the dignified person who entered upon the representation of that Government, and who so worthily represents it to-day. All this left the Government of Her Majesty in perfect liberty to act without the possibility of its acts being attributed to aught except its own convictions.

"This state of the matter obliged the Government to order a conscientious examination of the facts of the case. The Minister was not content with doing so himself—he submitted this examination to the Chiefs of Bureaux, five, six or seven persons among these who, always intelligent in this matter, had had action in the subject. He called in, invoked in his aid other persons well informed, and the unanimous opinion of all, absolutely unanimous, was the following:"

In the remainder of the speech the España will find the exact narrative of what occurred with the Black Warrior. That is to say: Señor DE LERSUNDIA has already, in full Parliament, stated that the satisfaction due to the outrage of the Black Warrior, although it was just, had had to be delayed from a sentiment of dignity against the discourtesy of Mr. SOULÉ; that the departure of this man, and the circumstance of his place being occupied by another dignified person who interpreted, in an entirely different manner, the desires of his Government, as was done by Mr. PARDO, left our Government in perfect liberty to comply with the dictates of justice; and that in order to do so he was not content with his own opinion, but submitted this subject again and again to the opinions of the directors and chief officers of bureaus.

And here we would call attention to the competence belonging to two of these chief officers who took part in the arrangement of the affair of the Black Warrior—Señor DON JACINTO ALMENTER (now Spanish Minister to Buenos Ayres) and Señor DON MIGUEL DE LOS SANTOS ALVAREZ (now Spanish Minister to Mexico)—gentlemen as distinct in their political ideas, as they are similar in their good talent and unspotted patriotism.

We should be glad to conclude the article without destroying for the España any more of its illusions; but it is impossible. Illusion, at least, is all that about the conduct of our representative in Washington. Señor DE CUETO, at the time the Black Warrior affair was arranged. The Heraldo thinks, and is right in thinking, that politicians, who do not belong to the party of the Government, have a double obligation to decline all participation in what they consider a dishonor to their country. Señor DE CUETO did not owe to this Administration his appointment of Minister to Washington. His gratitude and his sentiments belonged to another party, and he might have shown himself as much as he pleased with Señor DE LERSUNDIA, residing on at the same time his resignation, which, in such cases, is always essential.

PREVENTION OF COMPLICATIONS.—We have received from Mr. C. D. SHEPHERD a card in which he takes exceptions to the decision of the Western Bankers, adverse to his new plan of preventing counterfeits. We have published, as simple matters of news, the fact of the discovery and account of its alleged operation in Boston, but Mr. SHEPHERD, in justice to himself, desires it proper to state that his plan has not been submitted to a fair trial, and proposes that it be submitted to a mixed Commission of scientific men.

It was not only the giving of due and decorous satisfaction to the party who rightly claimed it, but it was a chastisement to those who, by their insensate conduct, had made that satisfaction necessary.

The state of our relations with the Government of Washington was not bad because of the ill-will of the American people towards us, but because of the hate of the Norteros and the antipathy of the Pensilos towards that people—a hate and an antipathy which have served as a pretext for adventurers to foment a war.

The craft of the Moderados being accustomed to navigate according to the breeze from France, all friendship with more liberal peoples was thought unnecessary and pernicious; and so our international policy, so affectionate and submissive for some, was hard and peevish towards others. And does the España now cry out, because we wish that policy to be equally just towards all nations?

The affair of the Black Warrior, was only one of the many blunders committed in Cuba by General PEZUELA, in accordance with the policy of the Moderados. The complaint of the outrage done to this vessel of the Union was presented by Mr. SOULÉ when DON LOUIS SARTORIUS was Prime Minister, and it is easy to understand how he should not disapprove the conduct of PEZUELA as well as how CALDERON DE LA BARCA should not dare to think what his Chief had not thought.

It is said that the brusque manner in which Mr. SOULÉ presented the complaint, contributed much to this firmness on the part of SARTORIUS, and this appears to us very probable; because whatever may be our antagonism to some politicians of this country, we do not deny to any one, as does the España to Señor DE LERSUNDIA, the dignity of a Spaniard. SARTORIUS might have repulsed SOULÉ for this reason; we do not doubt it, but what we say completely sure of it, and so is the España, although it affects to be ignorant, is that Señor PACHECO, and after him Señor LERSUNDIA also repulsed him with dignity and energy. It is only by being in the secret of why it may be convenient to the writer in the España to say that the Government yielding to the menaces of Mr. SOULÉ had given a satisfaction to the United States, that we can explain to ourselves why he should fail in such a way to the truth of the facts.

It is impossible that the España ignores what all the world knows already from the documents published in the Anglo-American press and in the Spanish press. Why did Monsieur SOULÉ present his resignation and leave his post without waiting even his letters of recall, if not because, as he himself says in his resignation published on account of the "inexplicable tranquillity" to which she found himself reduced near our Government? Not only did Mr. SOULÉ not obtain the satisfaction which the España supposes, but not even so much as an answer to his menacing reclamations. The proof of this is found in the following document, published a year since:

Mr. Soulé to Mr. Marcy.

LEGATION OF THE UNITED STATES,
MADRID, Jan. 19, 1855.

SIR: The present rulers of Spain do not show themselves any more inclined than were their predecessors to attend to our grievances and to do justice to our demands.

Neither has their compunction been awakened by the scorching arguments I was instructed to place in their hands, nor their supineness disconcerted by the significant suggestions of the President in his Message to Congress.

They look at both with perfect indifference, and do not as much as trouble themselves even with resorting to soft words and empty protestations to lull our complaints into quiescence.

My position under such a state of things has become so unendurable, that I doubt seriously whether it will be in my power to delay even a few weeks my return home. I long indeed to be off from a Court where so little respect is paid to our country and where the opinion entertained of our weakness is a constant encouragement to offer us fresh and indescribable disgusts.

I have not had a word from Mr. LERSUNDIA concerning the disposition of Her Majesty's present Government towards us since I left with him a copy of your dispatch of the 23d June. Nevertheless, I will not depart from here without attempting to ascertain, in a free conference with him, what we are to expect for the future.

I have the honor to be, &c., PIERRE SOULÉ.
To Hon. WM. L. MARCY, Sec'y of State.

Well, the diplomatist who wrote that to his Government departed without having obtained an answer. How does the España dare to print errors which are corrected beforehand by this and that other press?

But if the España has been so blind as not to read the official communications published and republished, is it also so deaf as not to hear the speech with which Señor LERSUNDIA replied to the speech of Señor ORDAX AVECILLA, on this same subject of the Black Warrior?

We will copy some lines from the official Gazette of May 1, 1855:

"The Government of Her Majesty was resolved to do justice, but did not choose to have it imposed upon them.

"Then happened the departure of that Minister, (SOULÉ,) who certainly wished to give it the air of a measure, if not hostile at least, which could appear very much like it, and nevertheless it was no more than an ordinary proceeding. His policy had come to be in conflict with that of his Government; he had presented his resignation and it had been accepted, and in accepting it, that Government expressed itself in the same terms of good understanding and good friendship with the Spanish Government.

"So that, Sir, the Spanish Government in view of the communication of the 23d June, which it had received on the 6th of December, in view of the terms in which the orders of the Queen of the Representative of the United States at Madrid was effected, confirmed all this by the language entirely conformed to that of his Government, of the dignified person who entered upon the representation of that Government, and who so worthily represents it to-day. All this left the Government of Her Majesty in perfect liberty to act without the possibility of its acts being attributed to aught except its own convictions.

"This state of the matter obliged the Government to order a conscientious examination of the facts of the case. The Minister was not content with doing so himself—he submitted this examination to the Chiefs of Bureaux, five, six or seven persons among these who, always intelligent in this matter, had had action in the subject. He called in, invoked in his aid other persons well informed, and the unanimous opinion of all, absolutely unanimous, was the following:"

In the remainder of the speech the España will find the exact narrative of what occurred with the Black Warrior. That is to say: Señor DE LERSUNDIA has already, in full Parliament, stated that the satisfaction due to the outrage of the Black Warrior, although it was just, had had to be delayed from a sentiment of dignity against the discourtesy of Mr. SOULÉ; that the departure of this man, and the circumstance of his place being occupied by another dignified person who interpreted, in an entirely different manner, the desires of his Government, as was done by Mr. PARDO, left our Government in perfect liberty to comply with the dictates of justice; and that in order to do so he was not content with his own opinion, but submitted this subject again and again to the opinions of the directors and chief officers of bureaus.

And here we would call attention to the competence belonging to two of these chief officers who took part in the arrangement of the affair of the Black Warrior—Señor DON JACINTO ALMENTER (now Spanish Minister to Buenos Ayres) and Señor DON MIGUEL DE LOS SANTOS ALVAREZ (now Spanish Minister to Mexico)—gentlemen as distinct in their political ideas, as they are similar in their good talent and unspotted patriotism.

We should be glad to conclude the article without destroying for the España any more of its illusions; but it is impossible. Illusion, at least, is all that about the conduct of our representative in Washington. Señor DE CUETO, at the time the Black Warrior affair was arranged. The Heraldo thinks, and is right in thinking, that politicians, who do not belong to the party of the Government, have a double obligation to decline all participation in what they consider a dishonor to their country. Señor DE CUETO did not owe to this Administration his appointment of Minister to Washington. His gratitude and his sentiments belonged to another party, and he might have shown himself as much as he pleased with Señor DE LERSUNDIA, residing on at the same time his resignation, which, in such cases, is always essential.

Steamboat Collision on Lake Huron—Loss of the Steamer Northerner—One Life Lost.

From the Cleveland Plaindealer, April 29.

The steamer Northerner left here last Saturday for Detroit, with a cargo of merchandise, most of which consisted of supplies, provisions, and stock in trade of the fishermen of Saginaw. She left Detroit on her first regular trip to Saginaw, and was run on Sunday night by a collision with the steamer Queen, about four miles below Fort Gratiot, on Lake Huron. From Mr. H. HASWOOD, who was a passenger on board with his wife and child, we learn the following particulars. There were on board about one hundred and thirty-four passengers and crew. He was a fisherman, on his way to Saginaw, as were many of the passengers. The Northerner passed into Lake Huron about twenty minutes before midnight, and was steering a northeasterly course to clear the bar, when her course for Saginaw, and the lights of the steamer Queen were discovered. The wheelman kept falling off to the starboard to avoid the other boat, but in a few minutes the same down under full headway as it seemed, and struck the Northerner on her larboard bow, about twenty-five feet aft the stem, and with force to cut through her side to the midships.

The blow was a terrible one, and the Forest Queen sunk in the breach for a moment, but fell off, the Northerner commencing to sink rapidly, with the water pouring like a river into her hull. The Northerner sank to the bottom in five minutes, and it is almost miraculous that so many should have been saved; only one is known to be lost, Mr. FRANK MOORE, the second engineer, who was asleep in his room forward, but did not awake. The rest, many of them being boatmen, sailors and fishermen, acted with prompt coolness, and were saved in the boat which carried them on board the Forest Queen. Mr. H. who was on the deck at the time of the collision, ran to the state-room, burst the door in, called his wife and children up, and without losing a moment to allow them to dress, caught one under each arm and carried them off the sinking steamer just in time to save them. The Clerk, Mr. A. S. KELSEY, went down to the office to get the books, papers and other valuables out of the safe, but he was too late; the water was up to his chin, and rising so rapidly that he returned to save himself.

The Northerner a hurricane deck is just above the surface of the lake. She had been purchased last winter of the Messrs. TUNNICLIFF of this city, by her master, Captain RANSOM COLE and Mr. A. S. KELSEY, and had just been put upon the line with the Sam Ward, running to Detroit and Saginaw. She was valued at $20,000. Mr. MOORE, the second mate, was a resident of this city, at No. 120 St. Clair-street. He was a single man, his parents residing in Sandusky.

With what the Clerk has, if there be any, it is an open a little doubtful. There was a slight fog as usual when the night wind stirring. It is barely possible that the wheelsman of the Forest Queen mistook the light of the Northerner for the Fort Huron light for which he was making, and steered for it.

PREVENTION OF COMPLICATIONS.—We have received from Mr. C. D. SHEPHERD a card in which he takes exceptions to the decision of the Western Bankers, adverse to his new plan of preventing counterfeits. We have published, as simple matters of news, the fact of the discovery and account of its alleged operation in Boston, but Mr. SHEPHERD, in justice to himself, desires it proper to state that his plan has not been submitted to a fair trial, and proposes that it be submitted to a mixed Commission of scientific men.

even in the smallest point, that he doubts the honor of the country, we think it doubtful whether he will encounter public opinion on such a question as this. Of the feelings expressed at the Mansion House dinner to Mr. DALLAS, we do not take much account. The party consisted exclusively of members of the Peelite and Manchester sections, notoriously opposed to a rupture with this country on any pretext, with one exception, that of Lord STANLEY, who, while still adhering nominally to his father's party, is in conviction and even in action a disciple of the Manchester school. The real test will be the motion of Mr. BAILEY on the American dispute, of which we may have some report by the next steamer.

Mr. BAILEY is a discontented Peelite, who refused office by his own party, joined that of Lord DERBY, and held the office of Under-Secretary for the affairs of India, in the short-lived Administration of that nobleman. Upon the subject itself, he is not likely to have any strong feeling, and merely takes it up as a party move. If Lord PALMERSTON opposes his resolutions, and is sustained in his opposition by a section of the Tory Party, who are reported to be ready "to back PALMERSTON, in putting down those republicans," it is likely the Premier will hold his present attitude, and our difficulties with England assume a more serious aspect. But if the Tory Party should adhere to their leaders, and find themselves strengthened, as they will be, by the Peelite and Free-Trade sections from Lord PALMERSTON's side, the Premier will have either to retire, or recede from his present position. Should he adopt the former alternative, he will retire but to be recalled, in a few months, with a more powerful Government.

It is utterly impossible that Lord DERBY's Government, which is the only one that would venture to assume the Government on the overthrow of the present Administration, could long be permitted to retain the reins of power—led as they are by a dilettante Jew, whose only star is self, and who has no care either for the national honor or glory, and consisting of a crew of reckless incapables. Mr. GLADSTONE, who is perhaps the purest, noblest and ablest statesman England has ever produced, and such men as Mr. HERBERT, Mr. CARDWELL and the Duke of NEWCASTLE, would never consent to sit at the same Council table as Mr. DISRAELI. Now that peace has been made, we look to see the Government of England in the hands of the same men who administered it (either immediately or after a time) at the opening of the war, with the exception of Lords ABERDEEN and JOHN RUSSELL.

The Deficiency Bill.

It is a satisfactory indication of the purpose of the new Republican Party to restore the Federal Government to its early principles, that the Deficiency bill encounters the most rigid scrutiny in the House of Representatives. Every item is examined, as if suspected of peculation; and some have been found so monstrous as to obtain their very unceremonious ejectment, or material reduction. The fact, as a novelty in the monotonous system of plender dominant there, is gratifying and hopeful.

The Deficiency bill is one of those methods of evading the right, constitutionally appropriate to the popular branch of Congress, of originating money bills. Because, displaying none of the bold pretension which marked the recent attempt to transfer that right to the Senate, it has grown into a custom, through oversight of its dangerous tendencies, and effectually defeated the organic provision that no money, not previously appropriated by Congress, shall be drawn from the Treasury.

Three millions of dollars are yearly expended by Government, without any legislative authority. It goes to all manner of uses, many of them never contemplated by Congress, and incapable of securing its sanction when afterwards presented in the shape of necessary deficiencies. If once such excessive outlays obtained indulgence, it was upon the ground that objects for which Congress had made appropriations must have suffered because of the inadequacy of the amounts assigned, unless the Executive had acted on the implied intention of the Legislature in anticipating further appropriations. Dangerous as this innovation must appear to the strict constructionist, it was susceptible of plausible defence. But when objects unauthorized by Congressional action—military expeditions, naval endowments, enlargement of salaries, on an extended scale, topographical surveys and secret service—are furnished as the items of a vast expenditure of public money, it becomes an imperative duty to inquire where in the Constitution is authority bestowed upon the Executive Department thus to exercise legislative functions, and assume the right to make and expend appropriations. For, notwithstanding these disbursements, come up subsequently for legislative ratification, the fact is only formal; the disposition to resisert suddenly a sleeping principle, by flinging the responsibility of such expenses upon those who presumed to incur them, needing strength even in a Republican House of Congress. The wrong has precedent, and can only, therefore, be reformed fairly after notice and warning.

People familiar with the working of political machinery, know well the reasons for maintaining a perpetual deficiency; and know, likewise, that it would, in all probability, exist next year, if the Civil and Diplomatic appropriations should now be doubled in amount. It is so much easier to bring a refractory Committee of the Whole to acquiesce in wrongful acts already accomplished, than to bespeak its co-operation in advance. Let us assume a case. A political campaign approaches, and the military chest, as well as the reputation of the Administration, needs reinforcement. The swindling expedient is an extensive one; office-holders, large and small, from Secretaries down to stevedores. It is also indispensable to keep that vast army in the most amiable of humors, as a prerequisite to active personal devotion in the struggle, and amiability

[illegible] Lord CLARENDON's conduct throughout the various and complicated negotiations which have arisen throughout the war without admiration for that manly, straightforward and, at the same time, humanitarian spirit, which has equally elevated the character of his country and his own. While doubts have been expressed in every journal in Europe and this country as to the good faith of LOUIS NAPOLEON, of FRANCIS JOSEPH, of WILLIAM of Prussia, and even of NICHOLAS at various times, not one even of those who most strongly disapproved the policy of England, and most [illegible] in any of her momentary disasters, has [illegible] a doubt of her faith. [illegible] Lord CLARENDON's disregard of some of Lord PALMERSTON's injunctions, and assent [illegible] responsibility to several conditions [illegible] that peace was brought about.

Men will [illegible] the bread of peace, and think not whence it [illegible] Of the two, perhaps, this peace is rather [illegible] in England. The aristocracy may be happy to receive it, in the eager desire to expose no further the short-comings of their order. The manufacturing classes will rejoice in it, from a deep conviction of the evils of even [illegible] war, and the drag-back it gives to the [illegible] and progress of civilization. But [illegible] who have furnished the [illegible] this war, feel bitterly that they have not caused the losses to which their [illegible] and [illegible] them, and which, had the war lasted somewhat longer, they would have seen. To this disappointed feeling the Opposition Party in England will be ready to appeal, and they seem inclined to take the American question as their battle-field.

[illegible] they could not have selected a better [illegible] Many of those who usually support Lord PALMERSTON's Administration, including the Manchester and Peelite sections, will oppose a [illegible] on almost any ground, [illegible] so much very questionable [illegible] as forming the subject of dispute. The more victorious for England [illegible] the war with this country, the deeper would be her disaster. The more injury in [illegible] would be England's lot. The more bitter America's defeats, the more bitter would be the [illegible]

[illegible] a general elevation of salary is experienced by all the intended victims, preliminary to the presentation of the assessment roll; and that elevation goes into the Deficiency bill, as so much unestimated increase in the cost of collecting the revenue, coining or counting dollars, or dealing in any of the uses of red tape. The Deficiency bill now under discussion in the Lower House of Congress, embraces, it is well known, among the four or five millions of dollars it calls for, nearly a million thus drawn from the people's Treasury to serve the personal and selfish ends of politicians in office. The disastrous fields of New-Hampshire, Connecticut and Rhode Island, were not lost through needless parsimony of public wealth. The Republican majority in the House is merely invited to foot the bill of expense incurred by Government in its endeavor to defeat Republicanism in a half dozen States. The invitation will admit, we think, much hesitation before it is unconditionally accepted. The items of these unauthorized prodigalities need only be brought to such scrutiny as members seem inclined to apply to melt away like ghosts at day-break. The inquiry cannot be too unsparing.

Lord Clarendon's Muskets.

The correspondence—given at length in the TIMES of yesterday—between an alleged Agent of the Costa Rican Government and the British Foreign Office, is a new chapter in the literature of Nicaragua. Two thousand muskets, through the brokerage of the Earl of CLARENDON, are, we learn from these letters, placed in the hands of the army opposed to WALKER; and we are also told that the Agent aforesaid was cordially congratulated by his lordship upon the statement that 800 of the Costa Rican forces were concentrated upon the northern frontier with a view to the expulsion of the filibusters. The moral of the whole is, that WALKER is not merely contending against an insignificant neighbor, but against the arms and sympathy of Great Britain; and the worth of such a moral in stimulating counter-sympathy and aid is not to be over-rated.

We have spoken of the literature of Nicaragua. The only department of letters largely cultivated there is, we regret to say, romance. These epistles bear significant marks of origin in that particular school. There are many things easier to believe than that Lord CLARENDON has undertaken the duties of Commission factor for the war office of Costa Rica. On the eve of the assembling of the Plenipotentiaries at Paris, among whom the British minister was to play a foremost character, that he might seek relaxation from the onerous duties of directing the toils of a vast clerical force, the preparation of State-papers, and protocols, and memorials, and the provision requisite for a protracted absence from office, by a run among the second-hand shops of the Strand, is not wholly impossible. It may be even so; and we may give the largest credence to the additional circumstance of sympathy with the spirited Costa Ricans; but the whole story is of such unhappy nativity as to need a better argument than a possibility of its truth to vouch for it. We may safely suspend judgment, until further facts are presented.

Such appears to be the decision of the Senate, to whom the subject was presented last evening by Senator WELLER. Senator WELLER leaned to the opinion that the correspondence established the fact of British intervention in Central American affairs. Mr. DOUGLAS followed in the same direction, and denounced the musket business as a part of the constant system of treaty violation of which England is guilty in regard to that part of the world. In what section of the Clayton-Bulwer treaty any provision against such acts as this charged upon Lord CLARENDON is to be found, we cannot guess; the only stipulations in regard to repressing or refraining from hostilities along the line of the ship-canal then projected having reference to its safety after completion. As the Canal is utterly abandoned, and is pronounced impracticable, the clauses of the treaty dependent upon it, become, of course, inoperative. Mr. DOUGLAS has overlooked this circumstance; and is therefore too hasty in construing the apocryphal story of British interference for Costa Rica into a casus belli between that Government and ours. The pause for better information, recommended by Mr. SEWARD, will, we suspect, produce wiser counsels.

More Trouble in Kansas.

It will be seen by our special Correspondence from Kansas, published this morning, that new causes of trouble have appeared in that State. The return of Mr. S. N. WOOD to his place of residence in Kansas has occasioned a fresh exhibition of the unrelenting spirit with which Border Ruffianism pursues the Free-State men. Under cover of an old warrant, issued some four months since, Sheriff JONES, whose name is already famous in the annals of Kansas, has attempted the arrest of Mr. WOOD, on a charge of having assisted in the affair of the BRANSON rescue; but, resisted in the service of process, has been foiled in the effort to deprive Mr. WOOD of his liberty. Finding that he could not effect the arrest, the Sheriff drew a pistol, but it was wrested from his grasp, and the Free-State Party had the best of the struggle. Mr. WOOD, we presume, has acted, in this matter, on the ground that the warrant issued for his arrest was illegal, and that he was justified in the course he adopted. In fact, he publicly stated in the course of the speech delivered in the Republican Caucus at Pittsburg, that the Free-State men with whom he acted had predetermined the course proper to be pursued. Mr. WOOD is an active Republican, and an enthusiastic Free-State man, having at heart the interests of Kansas, and laboring in her cause with much earnestness. The fact that he was a prominent actor in the BRANSON rescue case naturally renders him obnoxious to the Pro-Slavery interest in Kansas, and hence the troubles that now threaten to become serious. The Pro-Slavery organs distinctly announce the intention of Gov. SHANNON and his myrmidons to enforce the writs and laws of the bogus Territorial authorities, even if military force is required necessary to complete the task. A renewal of the exciting scenes of a few months since is not improbable; but the Free-State men grow stronger, and promise to make their mark in the record, more effectually than they have hitherto been able to do. No longer cramped by the want of men and arms, they will be able to make head-way against the tide of opposition which they are compelled to encounter, and will render a good account of themselves in the event of any serious invasion of their rights as citizens.

Dangerous Office for a Republican.

Governor GARDNER, of Massachusetts, it appears, has removed a Mr. BARNES from the office of State Prison Inspector, on account of his having joined the American Republican movement. It may, at the first glance, seem a very odd reason for displacing him from such an office as that of State Prison Inspector; but Governor GARDNER probably imagines that a man who is so favorable to Freedom as the American Republicans are known to be would be a dangerous person about a State prison, lest he might be letting some of the prisoners go free.

Death of the Hon. Ogden Hoffman.

The announcement which we make this morning of the death of OGDEN HOFFMAN, will cause a sensation of profound grief, not alone in this City, where he has so many personal friends, but in distant parts of the Union where he is well known and esteemed. No public man in New-York has ever had a larger circle of personal friends, and so few enemies; indeed, the genial and kindly nature of Mr. HOFFMAN influenced him in his course in politics as much as in private life, and saved him from the hostile opponents which political differences are so apt to create. He died yesterday afternoon, at 2 o'clock, at his residence in Ninth-street, of congestion of the lungs, after a brief illness of five days. The funeral will take place to-morrow afternoon, at 4 o'clock, from the Church of the Annunciation in Fourteenth-street. He was 63 years old.

Mr. HOFFMAN was the eldest son of the late Judge JOSIAH OGDEN HOFFMAN, and half-brother of CHARLES FENNO HOFFMAN, the novelist and poet. His son, OGDEN HOFFMAN, Jr., is United States District Judge in California. Mr. HOFFMAN entered the Navy at an early age as a midshipman, and was on board the President frigate at the time of her chase by a British squadron. He afterwards went to the Mediterranean, but retired from the Navy soon after the close of the war, and was admitted to the bar. He commenced practice in Orange County, and was appointed District-Attorney; but he removed to this City about the year 1826, and became a partner of HUGH MAXWELL, at that time District-Attorney, and distinguished himself in assisting the prosecution of the famous conspiracy cases, when HENRY ECKFORD, JACOB BARKER, General SWIFT, LAWTON, MOWATT and others were indicted for conspiring to defraud the public. He was then a member of the Jackson Party, but, after the removal of the deposits, he joined the Whigs, at the same time that MOSES H. GRINNELL, DUDLEY SELDEN, and other prominent members of the Democratic Party abandoned Tammany Hall. He was a member of Congress in 1836, where he was distinguished by his eloquence, and his prominence as a member of the Committee on Foreign Affairs. While residing in Orange County he was elected a member of the Legislature, and was also a member of the State Legislature from this City in 1828. He was District-Attorney from 1829 to 1835, and was appointed United States District-Attorney by General HARRISON. He was again elected to Congress in 1848, and was Attorney-General of the State in 1854-5. During the past twenty-five years there has not been an important criminal trial in this City in which he was not employed as counsel, and it was by his ability and surpassing eloquence that ROBINSON who was tried for the murder of ELLEN JEWETT, obtained a verdict of acquittal. Mr. HOFFMAN's popularity as a public speaker was greater than that of any man in the State; there was an almost magical sweetness and persuasiveness in the tones of his voice which made his appeals to the popular ear irresistible.

For more than a quarter of a century Mr. HOFFMAN has occupied a foremost position at the Bar of New-York, and been one of the recognized lights of the political party with whose fortunes he identified himself. He was twice married, the last time to a daughter of Hon. SAMUEL L. SOUTHARD, of New-Jersey. In his death, a brilliant light has been extinguished, and a void created which will not be easily filled.

FOREIGN GOSSIP.

Fireside Talk on Foreign Topics.

Mr. CHISHOLM ANSTEY, once M. P. for the Borough of Youghal, Ireland, has arrived at Hong Kong, over which important Colony he has been appointed Attorney General. Mr. ANSTEY is a strange, ourang-outang-looking creature. Being bald, he labors under a delusion common to artificially high-foreheaded gentlemen, that he looks like SHAKESPEARE, of which supposed resemblance he is singularly proud. He was born in Van Dieman's Land, in which pleasant dominion his father holds large property. On coming to England, he started as a barrister and champion of the English Roman Catholics, and was for some time associated with the late Mr. LUCAS in the conduct of the Tablet newspaper. For his zeal in the cause of the Roman Catholics, of which he was a devoted bayard, he was made, by his Holiness the Pope, a Knight of the Gold Spur. He did not, however, get on much the faster for this addition to his heel, but soon, from restless ambition, became dissatisfied, and quarreled with most of the leading Roman Catholic ecclesiastics, including the present Cardinal WISEMAN. At the election of 1847 he started for the borough of Youghal, and on Repeal and ultra Roman Catholic principles, and was returned, Mr. UROQUHART, of Eastern notoriety, contributing the necessary funds. Mr. UROQUHART's object was to secure an assistant orator in the house to aid him in exposing Lord PALMERSTON's sale of England to the Emperor of Russia, a delusion which he and a few other fools then cherished, but of which recent events have somewhat disenchanted them. Mr. ANSTEY justified the expectation of his patron by a speech of seven hours, in which he accused Lord PALMERSTON of every crime committed beneath the sun. When he had concluded, Mr. SHEIL, M. P. for Dungarvan, the Irish orator, arose and promising "that the geographical propinquity of Dungarvan to Youghal must be my excuse for following the honorable gentleman," disposed in seven minutes of his seven hours' oration, amid the cheers and laughter of the House. A few days afterwards, as Mr. ANSTEY was sitting on a bench behind Lord PALMERSTON, the wily diplomat, with that gallant ease that sits so lightly on him, turned round and making some familiar remark, took the Commoner's arm, and, to his delight and confusion, walked with him out of the house. A few evenings after a small crowded card, "Lady PALMERSTON at home Saturday evening," displayed itself in the corner of Mr. ANSTEY's plate glass, in a fourth-floor chamber, in the Temple, and in Lady PALMERSTON's saloons Mr. ANSTEY was, henceforward, found in spotless white tie and waistcoat, a favored guest. If he had got a good price, exclaimed the Jeremiah THACKERAY, I might have forgiven him, but, oh! horrible to sell me for an ass. At the last election he had no hope for Youghal, but started for the Kilmarnock Burughs of Renfrew, where he was beaten. Lord PALMERSTON has, however, one great virtue of never forgetting a friend in the hour of distress, and, in the Abyssinian Commissionership of Hong Kong, Mr. ANSTEY has found a snug and the working politician a good and rather amusing Judge. A decent sort

Mr. [illegible] introduced the bill for the [illegible] in the House of [illegible] in the House [illegible] year the same speech and same [illegible] A few hours since, Mr. OSBORNE, the witty member for Middlesex, had a copy of his last year's speech in his lap, and, as he proceeded, called out, with his usual gay audacity, as he went out: "Now, old boy, for Ballymahon, near Bailey," and so on, to the intense delight of the House. Mr. SPOONER is usually seconded by Mr. NEWDEGATE, his colleague, another solemn swell, and their character was well illustrated by Sergeant MURRY, the member for Cork, and pay medicinal wit of the House. "There are three degrees of spoonerism," exclaimed the Sergeant, "Spoon, Spooner, Newdegate."

Mr. MEAGHER, the Member for Waterford City, and father of Mr. T. F. MEAGHER, made his maiden speech in opposition to Mr. SPOONER'S bill. Mr. MEAGHER, though not a speaker, is regarded with more respect than perhaps any of the Irish members both in the country and the House of Commons. He is alike insensible to favor, flattery or fashion, perhaps the most powerful enemies of all three; and it may be said of him, as of FABRICIUS of old, as well might you turn the sun from his path as him from the road of rectitude. He is a Roman Catholic of the severest intensity, both in practice and belief, and in politics inclined to what is for the time termed "the Independent Opposition;" but he is generous and tolerant in opinion, and with a spirit worthy of imitation among Irishmen, while sternly adhering to what he deemed right, did not, like so many of his countrymen, think it necessary to denounce all who differed from him as spies, traitors, perjurers and thieves. Mr. MEAGHER is a man of large fortune, which he employs with a beneficent generosity in doing good, and, though he has never shared in the enthusiastic national aspirations of his son, probably from a disbelief in the possibility of their realization, is intensely proud of his heroism and genius. The representation of his native city was forced upon both occasions upon Mr. MEAGHER, entirely against his wish, his tastes and habits, being unsuited to the turmoil of Parliamentary life, and as long as he desires he may retain it.

Sir ROBERT PEEL has returned with his beautiful bride from passing the honeymoon in Italy. Sir ROBERT is a noble, gallant fellow, with a heart and hand open as day; and like all such characters full of noble virtues and soft weaknesses. In his youth he was wild, kept LOLA MONTEZ, fought with the Jesuits, gambled in all the hells, and did all manner of dangerous and daring things. But ever since his narrow escape from drowning in the loss of the steamer in which he journeyed from Genoa to Civita Vecchia, some three years since, he has become a changed man, and we doubt not will make a right loving Royal lord. In person he is of splendid proportion, and with features which, if not delicately defined, are manly and full of fire. He wears, contrary to the usual custom in England, an imperial and moustache, and his hair, like his father's, is a slightly subdued red. But he has none of the cold caution which characterizes the decorous Bob, and that chip of the old block, his brother FREDERICK.

MOVING-DAY.

Changes in Progress—Buildings to be torn down—Buildings going up—Stores newly opened—and other improvements.

A decree of the Legislature of this State, in reference to the occupying of houses, or parts of houses, in this City, runs as follows: "Agreements for the occupying of lands and tenements in the City of New-York, which shall not particularly specify the duration of such occupation, shall be deemed valid until the first day of May, next after the possession, under such agreement, shall commence; and the rent under such agreement shall be payable at the usual quarter days for the payment of rent in the said City, unless otherwise expressed in the agreement." (3 R. S. p. 352.)

This statute was framed to protect an old usage—the custom of moving on the 1st of May having originated with our Dutch ancestors, as will appear from the following letter, translated from a German newspaper—the Staats Nachrichten, of December, 1758. It took a year at that time to send a letter from Germany to New-York, and receive an answer back:

NEW-YORK, the 12th of May, 1759.

MY DEAR KARL: Your letter of the 24 of December of last year was received about two or three weeks ago, and I would have answered it immediately, as a ship, the Prince Edward, then sailed. But we have been so busily engaged in changing our residence, that neither MARGARET nor I have been able to find time to write. We have moved from our former house in the Broadway into a new one, just built, in Horse and Cart-street, for which we are obliged to pay yearly a rent of £36. But it is a fine house, and so, after all, the rent is not so dear. All the houses here are hired, according to an old custom, from the 1st of May, and on that day all the farmers from Nassau Island and the Jerseys come over and let out their wagons for the citizens to move their goods with. We had three, for which we were forced to pay the large sum of 18 shillings for the day, so great is the demand for them then. Some people hire move every year, and seem to do it only for pleasure. I am heartily satisfied with my experience in it; and, as both MARGARET and myself and the children are pleased with the new house, I think I will remain in it.

The King of Prussia, the Sturdy Beggar, the Oliver Cromwell, and another of our privateers, entered our port some months ago with a most splendid prize. They took no less than 11 sail from the French, mostly good sized vessels, and two of them armed. The latter are the L'Aigle, of 300 tons, 14 guns, and 40 men; and the Leopard Joseph, of 200 tons, 16 guns and 36 men. The reason that their crews are so small is, that there had been sickness on board. Our WILLIAM, who, you know, is mate of the Oliver Cromwell, obtained a large amount of prize money, and has since gone to live from New-England as Captain of a privateer called the Humble Bumpkin, which is the name of a common coin in that part of America.

My business is increasing rapidly, and my family are all well and happy. If the present war ceases before long, I may come over and revisit you and the rest of my relations. Please write immediately on the receipt of this, as the ships from England are frequent but irregular. This from your loving brother.

It is a great pity that no name is affixed to this interesting letter, as in it we might perhaps recognize the ancestor of one of our "first families." It shows, however, that the fashion of moving on May-day was in vogue nearly one hundred years ago, and was then considered as an "old custom." Of late years some latitude has been allowed, and people endowed with foresight have made their "flitting" a few days earlier, so that we have now a moving week instead of a moving day. Still the first of May is the great day of transition, the exodus of New-York and the suburban places. The household gods, the Lares and Penates, are scattered on that day like rats chased by a badger, and boys before they pass from tunics into pantaloons forget were they were born, and their fathers almost forget. The old Hebrew imprecation, "Cursed be he that removeth the old landmarks," does not apply to New-Yorkers, neither have they any faith in the old adage, "A rolling stone gathers no moss." On the first of May, or thereabouts, a third of the families in the City, if only for fashion's sake, are bound to move. If the furniture gets damaged, if the carpets won't fit the new rooms, all the better. But the zest of the enjoyment is in the discomfort, and topsiturviness, the sleeping on the floor, the going without a dinner, and making shift without a tea; in the breakage of China, the smashing of glass, in the general antagonism and won't-come-to-rights obstinacy of everything. A married woman whose husband does not change his habitation at this season, almost feels that she is maligned, and defrauded.

Yesterday, being the 1st of the month, was the great moving day, and the fortunate of the fair sex were in the happiest confusion imaginable. It was a chilly, windy, uncomfortable day, which greatly heightened the enjoyment. To make it still better, it rained a little—a cold, wintry rain. The ladies wore old clothes and dirty gloves, and ordered servants about, and stepped with women, and gave directions about furniture, being particular with a love of a mirror, solicitous about a favorite bureau, anxious concerning a table, and tenfold agitated respecting a piano. Not that they were anxious, or concerned, or agitated. It was only make-believe, a part of the entertainment of the occasion. Bless them, they won't have such another time—all such moving day—full a twelvemonth to come.

Apart from these private vicissitudes of a great city festival—the moving in the 1st of May in New-York—it is a great day for the City. Old, time-stained buildings that are an eyesore to good citizens disappear, and fine new stores or more [illegible] edifices rise in their stead. Yesterday,

MEDICAL.

PRIVATE CONSULTATIONS.

DR. WATSON continues his practice in a certain class of diseases, in which he has treated more than twenty thousand cases, without one instance of failure. The medicines are mild, and do not keep the patient from business, or expose him to detection, which in most recent cases there is a cure in twenty-four hours. Dr. WATSON desires to state that, as many have been deceived by the assumed or false references, and have been injured by delays, patients are respectfully invited to call, in the first place, as there is no charge for consultations.

SANDS' SARSAPARILLA, FOR PURIFYING THE BLOOD.

The rare medicinal virtues and astonishing efficacy of this valuable preparation is immediately evidenced in cases where an impoverished and diseased condition of the blood causes eruptions, blotches and sores to break out upon the surface of the body. Its operation is speedy, while its effects are permanent, healing and removing. Prepared and for sale by A. B. & D. SANDS, No. 100 Fulton-st.

THE GREATEST MEDICAL DISCOVERY OF THE AGE.—Mr. KENNEDY, of Roxbury, has discovered in one of our common vegetables a remedy that cures every kind of humor, from the worst Scrofula down to a common Pimple.

He has tried it in over 1,100 cases, and never failed, except in two cases, both blunder humor. He has now in his possession over 200 certificates of its virtue, all within 20 miles of Boston.

Two bottles are warranted to cure a nursing sore mouth.

One to three bottles will cure the worst kind of pimples on the face.

Two to three bottles will clear the system of boils.

Two bottles are warranted to cure the worst canker in the mouth or stomach.

Three to five bottles are warranted to cure the worst cases of erysipelas.

One to two bottles are warranted to cure all humor in the eyes.

Two bottles are warranted to cure running of the eyes and ears.

Three to five bottles are warranted to cure corrupt and [illegible]

Two bottles are warranted to cure any eruption of the skin.

Three to five bottles are warranted to cure the worst scrofula.

A benefit is always experienced from the first bottle, and a perfect cure is warranted when the above quantity is taken.

Reader, I peddled over a thousand bottles of this in the vicinity of Boston. I know the effects of it in every case. So sure as water will extinguish fire, so sure will this cure humor. I never sold a bottle of it but that sold another; after a trial, it always speaks for itself. There are two things about this herb that appear to me surprising—first, that it grows in our pastures, in some places quite plentiful, and yet the value has never been known until I discovered it in 1849; second, that it should cure all kinds of humor.

In order to give some idea of the sudden rise and great popularity of the discovery, I will state that in April, 1852, I peddled it, and sold about six bottles per day. In April, 1854, I sold over a thousand bottles per day.

No change of diet ever necessary—eat the best you can get, and enough of it.

DIRECTIONS FOR USE.—Adults, one table spoonful per day; children over 8 years, dessert spoonful; children from 3 to 8 years, teaspoonful. As no direction can be applicable to all constitutions, take sufficient to operate on the bowels twice a day.

Mr. KENNADY gives personal attendance in bad cases of Scrofula.

Specially appointed by the proprietor and patentee of

THERIENIAC.—THE GREAT EUROPEAN DISCOVERY.—Protected by Royal Letters Patent of England, and secured by the sales of the Ecole de Pharmacie de Paris, and the Imperial College of Medicine, Vienna.

THERIENIAC No. 1.—Is the remedy of general and local debility, loss of virile power, premature decay, and all the distressing consequences arising from early abuse, &c., would not become exhausted, even in the decline of life, if the Theriemac were universally adopted; all physical impediments vanish like magic before its influence, thus rendering its use invaluable to those entering the marriage state.

THERIENIAC No. 2—Completely and entirely eradicates all traces of those disorders which copaiva and cubebs have so long been thought an antidote for, to the ruin of the health of a vast portion of the population.

THERIENIAC No. 3—Is the great European remedy for that class of disorders which, unfortunately, the English physician treats with mercury, to the inevitable destruction of the patient's constitution, and which all the Sarsaparilla in the world cannot remove.

THERIENIAC Nos. 1, 2 and 3—Are alike devoid of taste or smell, and all nauseating qualities. They may lay on the toilet table without their use being detected.

Sold in the cases at $6 each, or four cases in one for $20, which saves $4; and in $12 cases, whereby there is a saving of $8; divided into separate doses, as administered by Velpeau, Lallemand, Ricord, &c.

To be had, wholesale and retail, and forwarded immediately on receiving a remittance, to any part of the world, by D. BARROW, No 187 Prince-st. (few doors west of Broadway,) New-York. Hours of consultation and attendance daily, from 11 A. M. till 3 P. M., and from 4 to 6 P. M., (Sundays excepted,) unless by previous appointment.

DR. MAGNIN'S LUCINA COORDIAL, OR ELIXIR OF LOVE.—This delightful and positive invigorant of the human system is fast superseding all other remedies; in fact, when its virtues become fully known it will be the only remedy in use. Its action on the nervous system and reproductive organs is most extraordinary; allaying all over-excitement and infusing into the nervous organization that degree of tension which is requisite to give the human system the enjoyment of its full powers, both mentally and physically. Again appetite is so equally remarkable; assimilating with the gastric juices of the stomach, it enlists them in more readily dissolving all nutricious substances, and converting them into pure and wholesome blood; thus the digestion is improved and the whole framework of man moved on in a more vigorous and harmonious manner thereby. Price $2 per bottle, or two bottles for $3. Principal office, No. 36 Maiden-lane.

DR. MAGNIN.

$500 REWARD.—CROSSMAN'S SPECIFIC MIXTURE FOR THE CURE OF GONORRHŒA.—Of all the remedies yet discovered for the complaint, this is the most certain; it makes a speedy and permanent cure, without the least restriction to diet or drink, exposure or change in application to business. The proprietor challenges a single instance of recent Gonorrhœa to be brought which the mixture will not cure, under forfeit of $500. Many are cured in two days. Sold at the Depot, No. 278 Broadway, corner of Chambers-st., also at No. 16 Astor House, and at No. 166 Fulton-st., corner of William.

MEDICAL OFFICE.—DR. COOPER, No. 14 Mercer-st., between Chatham and William sts., may be consulted with confidence. POLICE INTELLIGENCE.

Note from Mr. Vandervoort.

To the Editor of the New-York Daily Times:

In the course of my examination before the Police Commissioners, on Wednesday, on a charge of "insubordination," the Mayor took occasion, after the dismissal of the complaint against me, while in a state of excitement, to denounce me as a spy on the Police Department, and discharged me with having "distorted and vilified what had transpired in his office," and concluded with the notable assertion, "that a man capable of such d—d ingratitude should not be allowed to encumber any office over which he (the Mayor) had control."

Now, Sir, the Mayor, doubtless, asserted what he had been informed, but, whoever his informant, I pronounce his assertions utterly false. I sincerely hope, therefore, he will take the earliest opportunity, for his own good name's sake, to substantiate them. In justice to my friends and myself I demand it.

CHARLES M. VANDERVOORT.

ARREST OF GENERAL JOSEPH J. CHAMBERS, LATE HARBOR-MASTER.

General Joseph J. Chambers was arrested, on Wednesday afternoon, by Officer Sullivan, on a charge of extortion and corruption, in his late office of Harbor-Master, in demanding and receiving illegal fees. He was brought before Justice Osborne, and discharged on parol, to appear yesterday, at 3 o'clock.

Yesterday he appeared for examination, but in the absence of Justice Connolly, who issued the warrant, Justice Osborne took bail in the sum of $500 for the appearance of the accused when called upon. The General was bailed by Thomas Belskey, Jr., of Verplanck, Westchester County.

We give below, in full, the affidavits that led to the General's arrest. They were made many weeks since, but owing to his sickness and absence from the City he was not arrested until the day before yesterday.

Thomas Kimball, of said City, being duly sworn, says: That he is now and for several years past has been the agent of the proprietors of the Albany and New-York Line of Canal Boats, and has an office at No. 6 South-street in said City; that he is acquainted with General J. J. Chambers, one of the Harbor-masters of the Port of New-York; that on or about the 4th day of May, 1855, the said Chambers as such Harbor-master, caused one of the boats belonging to said line which had been prior to that time lying in the slip between Piers 5 and 6 East River, in said City, to be removed to the small slip; that soon after such removal deponent saw Chambers in said City and remonstrated with him against the removal of said boat, and told him that he desired that said boat should be brought back again to its former place, and that if said boat should be brought back again, he deponent was willing to do as others did, meaning thereby that he was willing to pay said Chambers as such Harbor-master, the same amount that other persons had paid or agreed to pay for the privilege of allowing their boats to remain in the large slip of said River which were within or subject to the control of said Chambers; that said Chambers then informed deponent that said boat could be brought back, and the next day said boat was brought back to its former place by direction of said Chambers. Deponent further says that after said boat had been so returned as aforesaid said Chambers gave an order on deponent for the sum of fifty dollars for and on account of the amount to be paid him for allowing said boat to be thus brought back, which amount deponent paid to the person presenting said order; that afterwards said Chambers met deponent in said City and demanded of him more money for the purpose aforesaid, and deponent thereupon paid Chambers according to deponent's best recollection the sum of thirty-seven dollars, and that soon thereafter the said Chambers gave another order on deponent for the sum of thirteen dollars, or thereabouts, the amount of which order deponent also paid, making in all the sum of one hundred dollars, paid by said deponent to said Chambers, or his order for and on account of said boat. Deponent further says that said boat was an ordinary canal boat, and was about one hundred and twenty tons burthen, and he has been advised and believes that the fee which the said Chambers was entitled by law as such Harbor-Master to receive from deponent for the return of said boat into said slip, did not exceed the sum of one dollar.

THOMAS KIMBALL.

Sworn before me this 7th day of March, 1856.

MICH'L CONNOLLY, Police Justice.

Henry C. Robb, being duly sworn, deposes and says: that he is one of the firm of Clark & Robb, engaged in transportation business and having an office at No. 115 Broad-street in said City; that he knows Joseph J. Chambers one of the Harbor-Masters of the Port of New-York; that on or about the first day of June 1855, the said Chambers came to deponent and demanded of him the sum of seventy-five dollars for his said Chambers' services as such Harbor-Master for and on account of the boats which were under the control of deponent's firm; that deponent refused to pay that sum, but offered to pay him the sum of fifty dollars for the privilege of having a berth for said boats in the slip between Piers 3 and 4 East River, in said City, and in consideration that said Chambers should aid deponent in removing boats to and from said slip; that said Chambers thereupon agreed to accept said fifty dollars, and promised that he would always be ready to render official assistance whenever required by deponent; that relying upon said promise, deponent paid said Chambers at deponent's office aforesaid, the sum of fifty dollars in two installments on different days after said promise was made. Deponent further says that the said Chambers after payment of said money did not render any official services for deponent to his knowledge or belief, and that when the services of said Chambers as Harbor-Master were needed by deponent, he was unable to find said Chambers at his post of duty; said deponent has been informed and believes that most of the time during the season of navigation in 1855, said Chambers was absent from said City. Deponent further says that the boats above referred to were ordinary canal boats of less than one hundred tons burthen each, and that the legal fees of said Chambers for directing and causing the removal of said boats to or from the slip aforesaid, did not exceed the sum of one dollar for each boat, as he is advised and believes, and that in no case to deponent's recollection or belief did said Chambers direct or cause the removal of any of said boats after the payment of said money.

HENRY C. ROBB.

Sworn to before me the 7th day of March 1856.

MICHAEL CONNOLLY, Police Justice.

Peter Schriber, being duly sworn, deposes and says: that the deponent and Peter E. Schriber and Stephen King compose the firm of Schriber, King & Co., merchants, doing business and having an office at No. 8 South-street, in said City; that said firm, during the year last past, kept a boat named the Cypress, of about eighty tons burthen, as a feed-boat, to transfer cain from canal boats in the port of New-York; that during the past season of navigation said boat has been stationed in the middle of the slip between piers Nos. 3 and 5, East River, that a short time prior to the 5th day of June, 1855, Joseph J. Chambers, one of the Harbor-masters of the port of New-York, came to the said Peter E. Schriber, in the said City, and wilfully and corruptly, and contrary to law, proposed and agreed to and with him that if the said firm would pay him, the said Chambers, the sum of one hundred dollars—fifty dollars down and fifty dollars in the Fall—the said Chambers, as such Harbor-master, and by virtue of his authority as such officer, would bring the said boat up to the bulkhead and keep her there during the season. Deponent further says that said Schriber, in behalf of said firm, assented to said proposition, and in accordance therewith deponent afterwards, and on or about the said 5th day of June, paid to the said Chambers, at the office of said firm, in said City, the sum of fifty dollars; that afterwards, and in the month of November or December, 1855, the said Chambers called upon deponent and demanded from him the balance of said sum of one hundred dollars, with which demand deponent refused to comply, for the reason that said Chambers had not brought the said boat up to the bulkhead, as he had agreed to do; that said Chambers became very angry at deponent's refusal, and thereupon left deponent's office; that soon after, a boy called upon deponent, and stated that he had been sent by said Chambers to demand the sum of fifty dollars claimed to be due him; that to the statement of said boy this deponent replied that he should not pay said Chambers any more money, for the reason that he had not done as he had agreed to do.
